M. LINCOLN SIMPSON, fourteen-year-old Somerville boy, missing since Tuesday.

Leaving his mother prostrated with grief, M. Lincoln Simpson, fourteen-year-old orchestra leader of the Western Junior High School, Somerville, has been missing from home since Tuesday. He is the son of Mrs. Thomas Simpson, No. 194 North street.

A member of the graduating class of the school he is an accomplished violinist. He has been a member of the Bible class and the Sunday school of the West Somerville Baptist Church for ten years.

DISCIPLINED AT SCHOOL.

According to Mrs. Simpson, her son had been disciplined at school on several occasions. She says that on May 16 he was requested to remain after school, but refused. On May 19, 20 and 21 he did not attend classes, and during this absence, school authorities informed Mr. Simpson that it would be necessary to discipline the youth for truancy.

Simpson returned last Tuesday and was again told to remain after hours as punishment, his mother says. He remained and received his discipline. He returned home and studied for half an hour. Then he put on his cap and coat and left. He has not been seen nor heard from since.

SEARCH PROVES VAIN.

His parents have communicated with relatives and the police in vain efforts to locate him. His mother wants him to know that if he returns home at once his school work will not be as hard as that which has been confronting him. The principal, Arthur L. Doe, says young Simpson will certainly graduate in June, will receive his diploma and that no discipline will be meted out to him.

Simpson is a well developed boy, has brown hair, blue eyes and light complexion. When he disappeared he wore a dark blue flannel suit and a mixed tweed cap.

MURPHY DEMANDS ACTION

Barney Lawyer Appears in Court With Witnesses to Face Accusers

Attorney Thomas F. Murphy, accused of aiding and abetting his client, Herman L. Barney, to escape from the Charles street jail, appeared before Judge Connolly in the Brighton Court today to demand an immediate hearing of the charges against him. On Thursday Murphy agreed to a postponement until June 11.

Murphy was accompanied by a number of witnesses to testify in his behalf. He stated that he had asked Captain Daily and Sergeant Sullivan to appear ready to prosecute the charges. They had informed him that it would be impossible for them to attend. Following the appearance at the Brighton Court Murphy appeared at the district attorney's office seeking Mr. Pelletier with the idea of having him hurry the case along.

It is not probable that the police officers will appear, unless they are specifically ordered by Judge Connolly, who granted the continuance of the case. At present both officers are busy in preparing their case against the several defendants already arrested, and seeking evidence against one or two others.

The cases against Murphy, Mrs. Lillian Ashenden and Mrs. Mary Collins are, according to the authorities, linked together. Just at present not everything is complete. To go ahead with the case at this time, it is contended, might be prejudicial to the interests of all involved.

Today for the first time it can be positively stated that Mrs. Collins was in the Ashenden apartment on the night of Barney's arrest. She was called to in the apartment on that night by some of those engaged in the investigation of the case.

BORDEN WARNED BY RAILROAD MEN

Montreal, May 31.—Warning that railway employes in Canada may soon be affected by the general strike spreading throughout the Dominion was today sent to Premier Borden.

The following communication was delivered to the Premier:

"We, the executive board of division No. 4, railway employes department representing some 35,000 railway employes in the mechanical departments of all Canadian railways and negotiating on wages and working conditions with the Canadian War Board, having established the precedent of collective bargaining last year, which has proved so successful in maintaining harmony on Canadian railways, do insist that pressure be brought to bear on the different employers of labor involved, to accept this method of procedure and are amazed that such a state of chaos should be necessary to accomplish such a generally recognized method.

"Our members are very restless owing to the situation that has been created, as our members are about to become involved. Kindly reply what steps your government are taking to cope with the situation."

The first rioting in connection with the general strike now widespread throughout Canada was reported here today from Lethbridge, a town in Alberta. Due to interrupted communications the governmental is ignorant of the seriousness of the situation.

Lethbridge is in the centre of several mining camps in which strikes now predominate and where thousands of aliens are employed. It is reported that returning soldiers are assisting in the restoration of order.

The Winnipeg situation is reported improving and the city is assuming normal conditions.

The Toronto situation is not considered serious as none of the public utilities are affected. The general strike, however, is spreading throughout Western Canada.

American International unions are doing everything possible to prevent the affiliated Canadian unions from breaking away and joining the one big union and such influence is having noticeable effect in the preventing of many unions from walking out.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE LEADS BIG FIGHT TO SAVE DAYLIGHT

PROTEST FROM ALL IS URGED

Labor, Business and Recreational Bodies Advised to Send Views to Washington

The Boston Chamber of Commerce appeals to all business concerns and individuals interested in saving daylight to state their views by telegraphing immediately to Congressman Samuel E. Winslow, in order that he may present them to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce of the House of Representatives at a hearing to be held in Washington at 10 o'clock on Monday morning.

Because of the strong opposition expressed in all sections of the country against action on a measure so important as daylight saving in the form of a rider to the agricultural appropriation bill, the Committee on Rules of the House of Representatives intervened on Thursday to prevent the question from being presented as a rider.

MINORITY IS DETERMINED.

A resolution for the repeal of daylight saving was immediately presented and referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, so that the question now comes before Congress to be argued purely on its merits. It is now an open fight, in which a strongly organized minority of agricultural interests will attempt to repeal a law which has proved beneficial to the other people of the nation and which they apparently are anxious to retain.

Although the agricultural minority suffered a setback through the failure to have the repeal of daylight saving presented as a rider to the appropriation bill, the forces in favor of retaining daylight saving believe that their hardest fight is yet to come.

QUICK ACTION URGED.

The Boston Chamber of Commerce urges all business, labor, recreational and social welfare organizations to take immediate action to bring their views again to the attention of the congressmen from New England, and to have their individual members take similar action.

It is particularly important to present a strong case before the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at the hearing on Monday because the daylight saving law was adopted on the recommendation of this committee and an adverse report from the committee at the present condition might be sufficient to cause the repeal of the law.

Arguments favoring the retention of the present Daylight Saving Law were advanced today by men from all in the business life of Boston. The desirability of daylight-saving was expressed in all cases.

A concerted demand that Congress refuse to rescind the present law by attaching a repeal as a "rider" to the pending agricultural appropriation bill has gone out from leaders in New England mercantile lines, and Congress is being bombarded with telegrams asking that the proposed repeal be either held up or made a separate bill.

MAJORITY FOR PLAN.

Because of the self-evident advantages of daylight saving during the hard months, there has been raised throughout the cities of the country, and indoor workers and most metropolitan dwellers are strayed against its repeal.

George B. Johnson, president of the E. R. White Company, who is actively supporting the proposition to retain daylight-saving, said today:

"Everybody who at first favored the daylight-saving measure is still in favor of it and those who were skeptical about the advantages claimed for daylight-saving are now confirmed champions of it. That is my observation, at least.

"Notwithstanding the objections raised by certain farmers and mothers of very young children, the great majority of people are indebted to daylight-saving for increased health and recreation, and are desirous of continuing it.

"Undoubtedly the increased health and enjoyment of most indoor workers resulting from daylight-saving result in increased efficiency, although I hold no brief for daylight-saving as a purely commercial, dollars-and-cents proposition.

"We like it because it gives us a longer afternoon following the day's work and helps in the enjoyment of out-of-door life. Whatever adds to the general sum of happiness is a good thing."

LOWERS ILL HEALTH.

Ernest F. Lovejoy, vice-president of the Continental Clothing Company and a warm supporter of the present plan, said today:

"There was never a time when we have had so little illness among our employes as at present. I attribute its directly to the benefits resulting from the operation of the daylight-saving plan.

"It is beneficial from every point of view imaginable. Not only our clerks, but the management as well, profit by it. We all seem to be work in better shape in the morning because of the added hour of sunlight afforded by the present law. It would be a grave mistake to repeal it. I hope it will be continued in force every season as a matter of public welfare. Congress ought to leave it alone as it is clearly in harmony with the desire of a great majority."

TWO BADLY HURT IN FALL OF AIRPLANE

New York, May 31.—Pilot Robert J. Wylde, twenty-six, of Baltimore, was perhaps fatally injured when a Curtiss airplane fell near the Brighton Beach race track. William E. Rice of Rutherford, N. J., a passenger, was seriously injured.

SEND THIS TO YOUR MEMBER OF CONGRESS

PETITION TO THE NEW ENGLAND SENATORS AND CONGRESSMEN TO RETAIN THE DAYLIGHT SAVING LAW.
Sign this petition. Have your friends sign it.

To the New England Senators and Congressmen in the Congress of the United States:

Whereas, A rider calling for the repeal of the present Daylight Saving law has been attached to the Agricultural bill now in Congress;

Whereas, Daylight Saving having been tried last Summer was found so successful and beneficial that it was welcomed again this Summer;

Whereas, Daylight Saving is heartily approved by manufacturers, merchants, professional persons, clerks, artisans, school and college authorities and the great body of the public, with the exception of certain agriculturists;

Whereas, The increased use of daylight hours is a preventive of accidents in mechanical lines, a tremendous saving of artificial illumination, a benefit to the eyes and an extension of the hours of outdoor recreation;

The undersigned respectfully urge you to exercise your utmost influence and your vote to prevent the passage of this rider to the Agricultural bill.

We urge this to insure the continuation of an economic benefit to the great majority of men, women and children of this country.

Scots Ask for Drums Captured in 1776 by Americans

Have you a little British drum in your home? The Royal Scots Fusiliers "ask to know."

Adjutant - General Jesse F. Stevens of Massachusetts has received a letter from Adjutant-General of the Army J. C. Ashburn at Washington, seeking to locate the drums of the North British Fusiliers, said to have been captured in 1776 by the Americans. The Scottish regiment still exists and has asked the British military attache to get its drums back. The suggestion had been made that they may be in some museum.

Adjutant-General Ashburn believes that if the drums were captured they were probably claimed by the commanding officer. Therefore, Sons and Daughters of the Revolution, is there a British drum in captivity on your parlor mantelpiece, or in the sideboard that came over on the Mayflower?

TO PUSH NATION-WIDE 8-HOUR DAY IN SENATE

Senator Kenyon Plans Other Labor Measures for Immediate Consideration

By International News Service.

Washington, May 31.—Labor legislation will shortly take up much of the attention of the Senate, Senator Kenyon, Progressive Republican, of Iowa, newly named chairman of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, is planning today to carry through the Senate a program of labor legislation which will have wide scope.

One of the first labor questions which will be dealt with is that of making a nation-wide eight-hour day by congressional legislation. A bill providing for an eight-hour day already has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Moses of New Hampshire.

Senator Kenyon has also presented a bill providing for a Federal Industrial Commission to act as arbiter in labor disputes and to iron out difficulties between employes and employers.

Another bill in the interests of labor which Senator Kenyon advocates has proposed is for the establishment of a House and Housing Commission by the Federal government. This measure would provide for a commission to study and investigate means by which the government might aid in the construction of homes for those engaged in the industrial pursuits. This bill already has the support of employers, who maintain that it would do much to stabilize labor conditions.

Extension of Federal vocational training to those injured in industrial pursuits also is proposed by Senator Kenyon.

GERMAN STAND FOR PEACE ON 14 POINTS

Willing to Make Sacrifices of Territory and Money, but Want Terms of Honor

"will go to the uttermost limits territorially," says the note. The Teutons claim they stand unreservedly on the Fourteen Principles enunciated by President Wilson.

The note renounces sovereignty of Alsace-Lorraine, but asks for a plebiscite. Furthermore it cedes most of the Prussian province of Posen to Poland.

This cession of Posen would give the Poles free access to the Baltic Sea, the note points out.

The note covers a great deal of the ground included in the original communication containing the counter peace proposals, especially the matter of indemnity and the suggestion of the pooling of resources.

Germany offered to pay 100,000,000,000 gold marks indemnity (about $25,000,000,000), the first instalment to be handed over by May 1, 1926. The remainder was to be paid in annual instalments, the size depending upon the amount of Germany's income.

Germany, says the note, is ready to place her entire economic strength at the task of restoring Belgium and Northern France, making up for the production of the French coal mines that were ruined by the German army. The Germans offer to deliver 20,000,000 tons of coal annually for five years and 8,000,000 tons annually for the next eight years.

The note also pledges Germany to build merchant ships in German yards for the allies during a certain term of years that may be specified later. The Germans offer to make compensation for the river craft destroyed in France and Belgium. They also "consider" the ceding of part of the German industries, especially coal mines, as a means of fulfilling their obligations.

A plea is inserted for "equal rights for the labor world."

The note concludes by saying that the "principle of right is too sacred for the Germans to condescend to accept terms that they cannot fulfill."

Allies Characterize German Reply as Insult; To Stand by Terms

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN,
Correspondent of the International News Service.

Paris, May 31.—The allies intend to stand by the peace terms already announced in spite of the protests and requests of the Germans in their various notes. It was learned today that the Big Five have already decided that the German counter proposals are nothing more than insulting.

In the reply the Germans will be sharply rebuked for their endeavor to "bargain" on the principles of peace.

The only modifications that will be made affect the economic terms in order to facilitate Germany's payment of reparation. The original terms must be accepted or rejected.

Despite the strenuous Memorial Day, President Wilson arose this morning at 7 o'clock and after attending to his mail and a few conferences was at work upon the suggestions for the allied note which will soon be presented to the Germans.

Secret reports from Germany indicate that strong pressure is being brought to bear from Bavaria and the Rhine districts in favor of signing the treaty, although this is opposed by the junkers and by Dr. Mathias Kriberger, leader of the Centrist party and head of the German armistice commission.

American officials who have been in Germany declare that rejection of the treaty would mean the worst possible condition in that country. It would mean absolute starvation, and there would be no chance of armed resistance, as the country is in no condition to renew the war.

Germany could be brought to her knees by economic pressure within a fortnight. The one thing they could hope to achieve by rejection of the treaty would be a rearrangement of the terms for the payment of reparations.

Read explained that the weather was so thick that the NC-4 flew only about 100 feet above the surface of the water. This made wireless communication difficult. He said that the landing yesterday in the entrance to Mondego river on the Portuguese coast was due to a leak in the radiator. Otherwise the machine worked perfectly.

After being congratulated by Rear Admiral Plunkett, Read was set ashore where thousands of people wildly greeted him. The NC-4 was moored near the Corinthian Royal Yacht Club.

ORIGINALLY "LAME DUCK."

The NC-4 was originally the "lame duck" of the trio of American seaplanes, her motor going bad off the Massachusetts coast. After reaching Halifax she continued the rest of the flight with only one other misadventure.

Commander Read and his companions spent last night at Ferrol, having arrived there at 4:45 yesterday afternoon from the Mondego River, where they had been compelled to alight on the flight from Lisbon because of engine trouble. The repairs were quickly made and after an exchange of wireless messages the NC-4 took the air again at top speed northward, making the start at 7:27 a. m.

10,000 MEXICAN TROOPS MOVING AGAINST VILLA

En Route to Chihuahua City to Stamp Out Revolution in Northern Mexico

By International News Service.

El Paso, Tex., May 31.—Ten thousand Federal troops are en route today from Mexico City to Chihuahua City to defend that place against an attack by Villistas, who are reported to be concentrating nearby, according to a statement by Consul-General Andres G. Garcia at Juarez. The advance guard of these troops have reached Santa Rosalia and will proceed to Chihuahua City as soon as repairs to the railroad are completed.

Garcia declared these troops will be used to stamp out revolutionary activities in Northern Mexico and asserted that Chihuahua is not in danger from the rebel troops.

Francisco Villa, it is declared, is in personal command of the troops gathered near Chihuahua City.

Leaders of fourteen revolutionary factions are meeting at the camp of General Carrera in Nuevo Leon to unite on a leader for the combined rebel forces to take the field against Carranza. General Felipe Angeles, the Villista chieftain, is regarded as the probable choice, while it is reported Villa will be appointed second in command. This meeting is expected also to agree upon Dr. Vasquez Gomez as the revolutionary candidate for president.

Although the threat of Mexican Federal troops to march across United States soil on their way to attack Villistas is reported from Nogales to have been nothing more than a boast, United States forces are concentrating at danger points in anticipation of any invasion by the Mexicans. The 8th Cavalry in the Big Bend district has been reinforced by the 1st Squadron of the 5th Cavalry, under Major Frank, from Fort Bliss.

ELEVATOR GIRL HAS RIVALS FOR THE LOVE OF HER "ROMEO" KEYS

"LONELY" BLONDE WRITES

Scented Note Bears Declaration of Her Affection; Warns Keys of Fortune Hunters

Miss Florence Girardin, the Harvard Club elevator girl now engaged to marry John Baker "Romeo" Keys, will have to look to her laurels as Mr. Keys is in receipt of love letters from divers attractive young women bent on winning him from his determination to marry the girl of his heart's desire.

One enterprising girl, who has been attracted to Keys through his photograph in the newspapers, today wrote Keys a real love letter begging him to forsake Miss Girardin and cast no lot with here. She describes herself as a "lovely, lonely blonde."

Keys declared, after reading the letter, that were he an unattached young swain he "might fall" for the wiles of "Blondie" and suffer himself to at least consider her offer of proposal.

"But at present it is out of the question. I am unalterably determind to marry Miss Girardin, the loveliest girl I ever met. No adventuresome female, no matter how lonely or lovely, can come between myself and my loving fiancee," Keys declared proudly today.

WARNED OF FORTUNE HUNTERS.

The ardent epistle, which might set the heart of one less-schooled in feminine ways going pit-a-pat, is as follows:

"My dear Mr. Keys—I trust you will pardon me for writing you, but I have read of you in the papers and have taken a great interest in you.

"I take this great pleasure in writing to tell you that you would like me better than Florence Girardin if you only knew me.

"I am a lonely, lovely blonde with a wealth of golden hair, blue eyes, weight 120, and am five feet, two inches tall—just the kind you would like. How does that get you?

"Now if you could make some arrangement for me to make your acquaintance I would be more than glad to have the meeting reported in the newspapers. I would send you my full name after our meeting was announced.

"Don't you think Florence is marrying you for your money? I honestly think that she does not really love you as I love you. Take a true friend's advice and keep out of marrying girls that want money instead of true love.

"Your true friend, B. A. T."

The letter was written in a fine feminine hand on pink, scented notepaper. A faint aroma of heliotrope pervaded its contents.

POEM OF LOVE.

Inscribed on an extra inserted sheet of the same paper were numerous love lyrics and tokens of undying affection.

The verses read:

"When this you see remember me!
Though many miles asunder—
Others may have my company
But you may have my heart."

"When the golden sun is setting
And your mind from care is free,
When of others you are thinking
Will you sometimes think of me?"

"Roses are red, violets are blue;
Sugar is sweet, and so are you!"

"When rocks and hills are divided—
And I of you no more will see—
Just tear per pes and spare
And write a line to me."

"They say absence conquers love;
But, oh, forget this thought!
I tried the power in vain,
But you hath not forgot."

"Five hundred kisses" are inscribed on one sheet, together with a rough sketch of a man and a maid with the legend: "I'm losing my brains over you."

In another corner of the page is the question:

"Honest to goodness, would you not like to meet me?

"S. O. S." "BLONDIE."

HIS BEST GIRL.

The sixty-three-year-old "Romeo" was greatly amused over the receipt of the letter, and declared that the publicity which has been thrust upon him had resulted in the receipt of "many more" such letters from admiring females.

"But," he added with a sly wink, "they don't influence Romeo a bit. I still think Miss Girardin is the one best girl for me."

FISHERMEN SAY THEY'LL IGNORE ARBITRATION

Furious Over Failure of War Board to Help Them, They Propose Other Means

William Brown, secretary of the Fishermen's Union of the Atlantic, members of which man all the fishing fleets of New England, says that hereafter union fishermen will no longer treat with government labor boards or any other form of arbitration in their dealings with vessel owners, but will, if necessary, resort to other methods to obtain results. Secretary Brown declares there will probably be no strike for the present, but says threateningly that there are alternatives.

The union fishermen are furious over what they consider a slight upon their demands.

These demands were made early in the Spring, together with demands of engineers and firemen of steam fishing vessels and demands of mates and pilots of fishing vessels, all of which were put before the War Labor Board for arbitration.

The fishermen say that the engineers, firemen and pilots were given awards which wranted all or part of their demands, while the fishermen's demands were ignored, and they were never even notified by the War Labor Board of its decisions.

Secretary Brown says that the fishermen were now making less than before the war, with the price of supplies trebled. Before the war the average yearly wage and share of fishermen was $700. For the past three months, with the price of fish averaging three cents a pound, the fishermen say they have made less than at any time previous, and on some trips have not paid expenses.

"We are through with all forms of arbitration," declares Secretary Brown. "Hereafter we deal directly with the owners of vessels, and will take steps to insure ourselves some consideration.

"Very likely a ten-hour day may be one of those steps. Heretofore we have worked day and night, sometimes going for forty-eight hours without sleep. A good deal has been said about high wages made by fishermen during the war. As a matter of fact, the fishermen were worse off than ever before in the history of the fleet. Take it from me, something is going to be done about it."

ARREST MADE IN SOUTH BOSTON TRAGEDY

Victim of Shooting Refuses to Give Slayer's Name; Other Arrests May Follow

Frank Sidonis was arrested at his home in South Boston today on suspicion, in connection with the murder of Salvatore La Rosa, twenty-five, who died at the City Hospital, stubbornly refusing to name his slayer. Sidonis is thirty-five and lives at No. 150 K street.

Special Officer Flynn of Station 12 made the arrest. While the police are not disclosing all the evidence in their possession it is known that they expect identification of the two men who shot La Rosa to death at K and East First streets to be made shortly. Another arrest, possibly two, will be made.

The apprehension of the suspect leaves the shooting still much of a mystery. The refusal of the dying man to disclose the name of his assailant gives rise to the opposing theories that he was the victim either of the agent of some sinister secret society to which he belonged or else was shot as the result of a feud growing out of a love affair. He left a wife and child in Italy.

La Rosa was shot four times in the body, being hit in the hip, the head, the stomach and the throat, the last being fatal. He was seen reconstructing with two companions at K and East First streets a few minutes before the shooting and the others were seen plainly as the trio stood under an electric light.

Patrolman George Keefe on a nearby beat, ran toward the sound of the shots to see La Rosa's assailants escaping down a side street, where they separated and ran in opposite directions. One of the men lost himself in an open field nearby. The man who did the actual shooting was described as "wearing light clothing and tan shoes."

La Rosa was an employe of the Boston Elevated Street Railway Company.

Fourteen-Year-Old Miss Held Captive in Auto, It Is Charged, at Kittery, Me.

Kittery, Me., May 31.—Irving Strickland, his brother, Floyd Strickland, and a third man who gave his name as "Angie" Moulton, were arrested by Deputy Sheriff James K. Boardman for an alleged attack upon fourteen-year-old Avis Adams, a schoolgirl of North Kittery, in the dense woods almost within sight of her mother's home.

A fourth man, whose home is in York, is held as a witness for the hearing in Kittery Municipal Court.

The four men, who are employes of the Portsmouth navy yard, were returning in an auto to Ogunquit on Thursday afternoon, where the two Strickelands and Moulton live. The fourth man was riding as far as his home.

The girl, who was walking the three miles between the Shapleigh School to her home was invited to ride. She accepted the invitation and got into the car.

The men, instead of stopping at the home of her mother, Mrs. Clara Ruby, drove past at stop speed until in passing through the Kittery Point and Ogunquit. The fourth man left that time had left the car, but the three others, it is charged, took the girl into the dense woods. It is also charged that she was kept in the automobile with the men until next morning, when she was dropped, exhausted and unable to stand, within half feet of her mother's door.

The men were rounded up after a long chase and were arrested in Ogunquit, in Wells and at Kennebunk. They were placed in the Kittery jail and held in $15,000 each. Moulton was the only one able to furnish the bail.

The Adams girl was taken to the courthouse to identify the men. She told her story to the judge.

'Dry' Law a Success, Say 28 Governors

Conditions in general have improved in every way throughout the country as the result of prohibition, according to information contained in "The Verdict," the official organ of the committee appointed to secure testimony from the most reliable and representative sources as to the success or failure of prohibition. On the committee are President Lemuel H. Murlin of Boston University, chairman; Professor John M. Barker of Boston University, secretary; John L. Bates former Governor; George W. Coleman, president of the Open Forum National Council, and Henry I. Harriman, former president Boston Chamber of Commerce.

The committee addressed communications to the governors of twenty-eight States where prohibition has been in eect more than four months and the summaries of their replies unqualifiedly support the movement with the exception of Governor Charles H. Brough of Arkansas, who replies:

"Conditions are greatly improved since State-wide prohibition went into effect. Crimes have materially decreased, though there is considerable bootlegging. General Leonard Wood stated to me that the principal reason Little Rock secured the Camp Pike cantonment was because of prohibition."

Colorado has made a marked advance, according to Governor Oliver H. Shoup, who replies:

"Colorado has shown a marked advance in many lines. It is safe to say that the State never will revert to the old policy of licensing the liquor traffic."

MAINE—Governor Carl E. Millikenby C. E. Owen:

"In the past, enforcement was lax, nullification of the law became a system, so that conditions in some sections differed little from conditions under license, but recently prohibition has been enforced throughout the State and even in the judgment of business men there has been a new demonstration of the value of prohibition."

MICHIGAN—Governor Albert E. Sleeper:

"Our Prohibitory Law has already effected results of considerable importance. Arrests for drunkenness all over the State have been cut down to about one-quarter. Business men report that bills are paid more promptly, and the effect of prohibition on general business has been good."

MISSISSIPPI—Governor Theo. G. Bilbo:

...."Prohibition has brought a very marked decrease in crime, and a marked increase in material prosperity. Our people are delighted with the results."

NEBRASKA—Governor Samuel R. McKelvie:

"There is no doubt that if Prohibition were to be resubmitted to the people, they would give it a larger affirmative vote than it received when it was first adopted."

NEVADA — Governor Emmett D. Boyle:

"Business men are pleased with the results. The law is generally enforced without much difficulty, and the closing of saloons has brought noticeably beneficial results."

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Governor John H. Bartlett:

"Conditions have been so much better under prohibition than under license that many former licensees in Berlin are now outspoken for prohibition. Wecommend the following letter recently received from a former saloonkeeper: 'Since the cessation of the sale of liquor in our city I regard cities which were formerly license are: March, 1916, to March, 1918, under license ..... 1047 May, 1918, to March, 1919, under prohibition ..... 1047'"

NEW MEXICO—Governor O. A. Larrazolo:

"I believe that every decent American is in favor of the closing of the saloon but when we go further than the teachings of Christ and say that a man must not take a drink we are adopting a fad which is and always will be a failure."

NORTH CAROLINA—Governor Thomas W. Bickett:

"The prohibition question is no longer debatable one in North Carolina. There is many a man of character who opposed it. All these have now become convinced of the wisdom of the amendment."

NORTH DAKOTA—Governor Lynn J. Frazier:

"Crime has been greatly decreased. We have had prohibition in force in this State for a number of years by legislation. The benefits of prohibition are even greater than those of the constitutional amendment."

OKLAHOMA—Governor J. B. A. Robertson:

"Crime has been greatly lessened, business conditions greatly improved, and there is much more room the morals of the citizens cannot be over-estimated. Oklahoma is a strong for prohibition."

TENNESSEE—Governor A. H. Roberts:

"As a result of our experience, the prohibition sentiment in this State is overwhelming."

TEXAS—Governor W. P. Hobby:

"In our eight largest cities prohibition has reduced the arrests for drunkenness from 14,138 a 1917-1918 to 2,337 in the corresponding period, 1918-1919. I voted against State-wide prohibition, but after seeing its actual operations as shown by the effect upon crime and upon government in Texas, I am convinced of its practical value."

UTAH—Governor S. Bamberger by the Attorney General:

"Our penitentiary population has decreased. The people are happier. More money is being spent for legitimate purposes. Bills are being paid better. More home property is being purchased by the working people, and if the matter were submitted on a referendum today I feel that Utah would come as near being unanimous in favor of prohibition as it is possible for a State to come."

VIRGINIA—Governor W. Davis by —the Com. of Prohibition:

"Business interests which were the most insistent opponents of prohibition have been the chief beneficiaries of the change, in improved efficiency of labor, the reduction of accidents, and the great increase in the volume of business. It is gratifying to note the gracefulness with which they now admit that their fears have proved utterly groundless. The general benefit of prohibition upon the business interests, criminal record, peace and prosperity of the State is without parallel."

WASHINGTON — Governor Ernest Lister:

"There has been a marked improvement in conditions. Even in the larger cities, such as Seattle, Spokane and Tacoma, the sentiment for prohibition is much stronger today than ever before."

WEST VIRGINIA—Governor John J. Cornwell:

"No man of intelligence regardless of what was his position on prohibition, will today deny that the benefits arising from the suppression of the liquor traffic have been many. Crime has been reduced. Bank deposits have increased enormously, and all collateral benefits have followed."

Mayors and chiefs of police of the six largest cities where prohibition has been in effect over four months reply to the inquiries of the committee as follows:

ATLANTA—Mayor James L. Key.

Prohibition has proved a success in Atlanta in every way. Crime, drunkenness and vice have decreased. No general efficiency of the body of citizens has increased. General business conditions have improved. The law is being enforced without much difficulty, and the closing of saloons has brought noticeably beneficial results.

ATLANTA—Chief of Police James L. Beavers.

Drunkenness has decreased more than 80 per cent. Prohibition has been very successful here and it will be more so when we get the nation-wide prohibition law July 1.

BIRMINGHAM—S. A. Barrett, President of City Commissioners:

Prohibition has been a monumental success in Birmingham. Our main city prison, with a capacity of 400, has been converted into a parental school. Our growth under prohibition has been extraordinary."

BIRMINGHAM—Chief of Police T. J. Shirley:

"We have arrests for drunkenness in 1917 were 670, compared with 2,425 when we had the saloons. Since January 16, 1919, we have had boone-dry prohibition and a still tighter grip has been made. We have abolished our red light district which has been turned over to the Juvenile Court."

OMAHA—Mayor Edward P. Smith:

Prohibition has much greater strength in Omaha now than when adopted. Arrests for drunkenness and attendant offenses are less than one-third of what they were. Business was never more prosperous."

OMAHA—Chief of Police M. Rivers acts:

Crime has decreased more than 40 per cent, drunkenness more than 50 per cent, and this would be even greater if there were more funds for enforcement."

DETROIT — First Deputy Commissioner of Police William P. Rutledge:

"Drunkenness has decreased by one-half, and general conditions have greatly improved. I recently had 100 letters sent to manufacturers saying they would not go back to 'wet' under any circumstances—the general physical and mental condition of their men was so much better. The Detroit Board of Commerce states: 'Detroit's experience has proved beyond a possibility of doubt that prohibition is a most valuable contribution to industrial efficiency, higher productivity, and conservation of man power.'"

SEIZE 'GINGER' AND CIDER IN AYER RAID

Dice Also Taken by Federal Officers in Poolroom Visits

Camp Devens, May 31.—Jamaica ginger, containing more than 90 per cent alcohol, and cards and dice equally dangerous and several pairs of loaded dice were seized by agents of the Department of Justice and State officers in a raid on several Ayer poolrooms.

The raid was the result of complaints of officers of the cantonment, as well as civilians, who objected to the presence of various overseas soldiers who have been reeling through the town under the influence of liquor.

All attempts to learn where the men were procuring the liquor failed at first, until detectives were called in. One man, arrested on information, finally located the beverage with the kick in it and succeeded in getting some.

Overseas man have been complaining, too, of being fleeced of their money in "crap" games, according to the officials. One man alleges that he lost $2500 in one game, and a second says he came out $100 shy of what he had when he went in.

I., May 31.—About $1000 in cash and a large quantity of other tickets, and a suit case were stolen from the ticket office of the New Haven railroad station at West Barrington early today. The night telegraph operator discovered the break when he reported for duty. Entrance to the office was gained by forcing a front window.

THE STAGE

By F. J. McIsaac

GREAT ACTIVITY IN LOCAL THEATRES

At this period in former years Boston's theaters were wont to be closed tighter than a drum. This season we find one house only with its shutters up, the Hollis.

The Boston Opera House, long unchallenged is enjoying the most prosperous engagement in its history and the indications are that Jolson may run there with "Sinbad" three or four weeks longer.

"Flo-Flo" at the Tremont looks good for another fortnight at least. Though "Among the Girls" goes out of the Park Square, a new Willard Mack drama produced by A. H. Woods, will immediately succeed it on June 9th.

At the Plymouth Carl Hunt's summer musical stock company will open its season June 9th in "Oh Boy." The Gilbert and Sullivan revivals have been so successful that they have furthered their engagement by one week. Nora Hayes in "Ladies First" is having gratifying success at the Wilbur.

Those houses which have ended their dramatic season have been eagerly sought by promoters of big feature pictures. The Colonial has started off with a bang its season of Griffith Repertory which begins with "Broken Blossoms."

Next Monday Rupert Hughes thrilling novel of Belgium, and American women engulfed in the world war, will be shown for the first time in Boston on the screen. It is called "The Unpardonable Sin."

The following week a very daring film dealing with usually forbidden subjects, but which has the endorsement of the U. S. medical authorities, bearing the suggestive title "Open Your Eyes" will succeed "Eyes of the World" at the Shubert. The same day a photoplay entitled "Bolshevism on trial" will commence a run at the Tremont Temple.

Jolson's Merry Pranks

It is well-known that Al Jolson, the comedian who, with "Sinbad," is filling the Boston Opera House every night, is as full of temperament as an orange is of juice. It's almost impossible for Mr. Jolson to remain seated on one spot for five minutes.

He generally arrives at the Boston Opera House half an hour before the beginning of the performance. In order to go into the box office himself and help to sell what is known as "the line." Having done this, he rushes back on the stage to run through the hundreds and hundreds of telegrams and letters which he receives daily, and then at the beginning of the performance he sometimes goes in to the orchestra pit with the musicians and plays a cornet himself during the first twenty minutes of the "Sinbad" performance, as he himself does not appear until half an hour after the curtain has gone up.

At the present time, Mr. Jolson is also practising the saxophone and it is his intention to perform as a soloist on this instrument, at some of the special Jolson song recitals which he will give next year. Part of his day is devoted to playing golf, and part of it to sitting at the wheel of his sixty-horsepower automobile and racing madly around Jersey and wild roads where no ordinary automobile driver would take chances.

In his rooms at the hotel he has both a piano and a Victrola, with records of his own. He practices at least an hour a day on the piano, also composing new songs which he will render in the next Winter Garden production, which, as is the case of the present Winter Garden show, "The Rag Lag of Bagdad" and "A Night in the Ritz," both having been composed by Mr. Jolson himself.

Jolson is also somewhat of an amateur boxer, and he is not averse to putting in half an hour each morning with some of the wrestling crew on the stage of the Boston Opera House, thereby putting himself in fine shape for his performances at night.

Bendix on Conducting.

"Conduct light opera according to grand opera methods. Consider every night an opening night."

Thus Max Bendix, the violin master conducting the augmented orchestra for Fortunte Gallos season of Gilbert and Sullivan opera at the Plymouth Theatre, sums up his method. Although a large part of his long and successful career has been devoted to conducting symphony concerts, Wagnerian operas and concerts, Mr. Bendix does not consider light opera as much below grand opera in merit. He believes that an artistic conductor will use as much energy on the lightest of light operas as on Wagner.

"Despite some thirty years' experience in grand and light opera," he said, "this season is the first time I ever conducted Gilbert and Sullivan Opera. I like Gilbert and Sullivan because the public likes them. I believe that the public would patronize most liberally not only revivals of the other Gilbert and Sullivan favorites—'Iolanthe' and 'Patience'—but also revivals of the other light operas which delighted the eyes and ears of audiences of the past, the works of Offenbach for example.

"'The Mascot,' 'Martha,' 'The Bohemian Girl,' 'Fra Diavolo' and a dozen other classics of the past are deserving to be present generations simply through an overture or an aria. I feel confident that they would attract the public if given by a competent organization, such as Mr. Gallo now is presenting Gilbert and Sullivan opera in Boston. It is a chance indeed for some enterprising and artistic manager."

Bridging the Gulf

In some respects the most interesting feature of "Broken Blossoms," the most recent of Griffith's wonderful photoplays, is the earnest effort he has made to cross the bridge between the living drama and the shadows on the screen.

The conventional frame around the screen Griffith has discarded in this picture. Beginning with a stage setting most marvelously lighted, displaying the interior of a Chinese temple, with very effective pantomime by living actors, the eye is directed to a spot in the centre of the black stage where the picture appears. The outer edges of the picture are a deep blue, which fades readily into the blackness of the surrounding stage.

This blue border sometimes changes to a sepia or a lavender, and sometimes gives the effect of looking at an exquisite engraving which has come to life.

The captions still stump him. The big letters are necessary to the story, but they impede the illusion. I wonder how it would be if the captions were omitted, and somebody with a loud and mellow voice should read them out of the darkness.

The photographic side of "Broken Blossoms" is as marvelous as anything that Griffith has ever done. The most effective pose, the prettiest picture, and sometimes the most appalling one is shown with never-failing skill.

The orchestra score, which was composed expressly for this picture, is always successful in heightening and increasing the dramatic effect. Some day the great composers will write complete scores for photoplay. I have an idea that a Tristan and Isolde would be even more effective on the screen than it is in opera, with the voice parts given to instruments, of course.

A Large Lady.

"I am thirty-one years old, five feet seven inches tall, weigh 286 pounds, wear my own hair and am reasonably happy."

Such is the description that Florence Morrison, in Nora Bayes' "Ladies First," gives of herself, and if you have seen Miss Morrison in action on the stage you will confess it sems a fairly lionest description.

"Bigness does not bother me the least little bit," says Miss Morrison jovially. "In fact, it is really a help, for whenever a big woman is needed in a new production the managers invariably think of me as the largest candidate behind the footlights. The consequence is that I am seldom out of work. And work for me is more or less play. I don't believe in looking on the serious side of things. Anyway, no one would take you seriously if you happened to be as big as I.

"Laugh your way through life and you will be fairly happy,' is the creed that I have adopted. That is the reason I can laugh at myself and be happy over it. For I do laugh at myself, and, what's more, no weighing machine in the world can frighten me and make me run away from it.

"Why, indeed, should I be afraid of a weighing machine?" demanded this mountain of mirth—that is what they call me in "Ladies First."

"Surely not because I am big. I know most fat people detest any sort of a mechanical contrivance that will register their weight, especially in public, but I do not. I know that if I stay on the sunny side of 300 pounds I am doing well and thriving. Of course, I would like to weigh 'way over that amount, but but what I could carry the additional weight, but it might not be becoming. I weigh it properly clothed. You see, I buy my clothing now by the pound and get it at wholesale rates, whereas the average woman has to buy at retail prices."

Rose Old Local Favorite.

The fact that the author of "The Rosary," Edward E. Rose, made his beginnings in connection with the theatres in Boston, draws especial attention to the first production of that play on the stage of the Arlington Theatre next week. Mr. Rose was for some years stage manager of the famous old Bijou Dream Stock Company, and he was also manager of the Arlington Theatre when it was first opened under the name of the Castle Square a quarter of a century ago. He also wrote the play of the opening weeks at that house, "Captain Paul," and its success started him on his career as a successful dramatist.

Coincidences Coming Thick.

It's a curious coincidence that Denman Maley, one of the comedians in "Among the Girls," began his stage enterprises in Hoyt's "A Black Sheep," with Fred E. Wright the present stock manager. Mr. Wright is now manager of the Park Square Theatre where Maley is playing.

It was nineteen years ago since Wright and Maley first met in this most famous of Hoyt comedies, and they have been good friends ever since.

Maley was playing comedy roles in such pieces as "The Midnight Sons," "The Nevershines," "Tom Dodge," "The Midnight Girl," and other Weber and Field pieces and "The Kiss Burglar." For two seasons he was the hotel clerk in "Very Good Eddie."

It is another coincidence that Nora Bayes should come to town while these two old Hoyt fans are fanning with "Ladies First," which is a rebuilt version of "A Contented Woman," one of Hoyt's most popular farces of twenty years ago.

McISAAC says that

AL JOLSON in "Sinbad" gave the circus the liveliest competition last week and drew a succession of big audiences to the huge Boston Opera House. There is no indication that the end of the unprecedented run is in sight.

NORA BAYES in "Ladies First" has an attractive hot weather show with a lot of live comedy in it and good singing. She is pulling big audiences to the Wilbur.

"FLO FLO" will remain at least a fortnight more in Boston. Cort's lively musical extravaganza with its fine cast and pretty chorus has scored an unexpected hit in Boston, Tremont.

"AMONG THE GIRLS" will soon depart from the Park Square. It is Selwyn's big musical production with which he hopes to hit Broadway between the eyes. Cast headed by Percival Knight and Denman Maley.

"BROKEN BLOSSOMS," an absorbing photoplay of China and the Limehouse district of London, produced in Griffith's most realistic manner, will begin a second week at the Colonial.

"EYES OF THE WORLD," the big photoplay based on Harold Bell Wright's famous novel, will begin its fourth and last week at the Shubert Monday.

ARLINGTON THEATRE

Around the vital theme of the family and its sanctity is written "The Rosary," Edward E. Rose's remarkable drama which will have its first production on the stage of the Arlington Theatre next week. In the midst of the beautiful scenes of Westchester county, not far from New York city, the characters of "The Rosary" live and move and have their being. A husband and a wife are its central personages. The husband is a disbeliever in things religious; his wife is a woman of deep belief in the world unseen and to come, and in the righteous things of life. Equally strong in his convictions, thoroughly human and lovable personally and in his teachings, is the priest who plays no small part in the working out of the plot. The entire company will be in the cast, with Mr. Ayres and Miss Robinson in the leading characters, and the play will be staged under the direction of William C. Mason. "The Rosary" will be given for only one week, and immediate application for seats is advised.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE

"H. M. S. Pinafore," the ever-popular will be sung by the Fortune Gallo's company at the Plymouth Theatre next week, part of the repertory for the last week of the Gilbert and Sullivan season. The rollicking melodies of the good ship will echo through the Plymouth Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, and Thursday and Saturday afternoons. The cast will be as follows: Josephine, Mabel Day; Ralph Rackstraw, Warren Proctor; the Admiral, William Danforth; Dick Deadeye, Frank Moulan; Buttercup, Greta Risley; Hebe, Gladys Caldwell; boatswain, John Willard; captain, Bertram Peacock.

OH, BOY!

June 9 will mark the opening of a Summer season of popular musical comedies at the Plymouth Theatre under the direction of Carl Hunt. "Oh, Boy," the charming, rollicking, tuneful mixture of laughter, love, girls and music which delighted Boston for months two seasons ago, will be the first offering of the season, featuring Miss Dorothy Maynard and a notable cast. "Oh, Boy," written by that inimitable combination, Bolton, Wodehouse and Kern, is on record as Boston's favorite musical comedy of recent years, and Manager Hunt showed much perspecacity in selecting this piece to inaugurate his season.

DOINGS AT THE POPS

Nightly, except Sunday, from 8 to 11, Symphony Hall is the scene of prodigious entertainment, for Boston eats, drinks, talks and listens to the lightest of all music played by the finest of all orchestras—a rare combination which no other city has achieved.

Two special nights of more than usual interest are scheduled. Thursday, June 5th, will be Italian Night. A programme from the country of carolling tenors without some opera selections would be inconceivable; but the majority of the numbers on the programme are not from operas, which goes to prove that the Italians have produced unoperatic music which is both popular and delightful.

Tuesday night, June 3rd, has been partly taken over by the War Camp Community Service, Mr. C. W. Vandron, Director, for the entertainment of our soldiers and sailors.

PARAGON PARK

With a crash heard miles around the Hub, Paragon Park, the Summer playground of Greater Boston, opened last Friday, the Farm Garden, the park's distinctive eating place, having opened the evening before. The new big music and girls' show, "The Broadway Revue of 1919," featuring the tried favorites, proved an instant success on the stage in the Palm Garden, and Marmida's diving girls in their elaborate new act, "Psyche at the Bath," took the audience by storm. Two orchestras are heard in the Garden this season, one of them being a saxophone jazz band, which, in addition to playing in the revue, also provides the music for dancing. The leading parts in the revue are taken by Edna Leader, Francis Feasley, Louis Mack, Ethel Grey, Dorothy Manning, Mabel Clifford, Mina Digman and Effie Fredericks. The ballets are led by Florence Stevens, Hazel Morgan, Benny Bernard, Rose Henderson, Jose Clark, Betty Thompson, Lucille Goddard, Betty Sands, Marjorie Harding, Rose Koley and Pearl Kelsy.

PEMBERTON INN

Every guest at Pemberton Inn, the dining palace de luxe of the South Shore, will have a chance tomorrow to fly over the Atlantic Ocean, and it will be interesting to see how many avail themselves of this, the latest innovation in dining sensations. A Curtiss "F" seaplane of the latest type, provided by the New England Airplane Company, will be at the service of guests. It will make flights every half hour, taking as passengers such of the guests as may wish to see how it feels to fly over the Atlantic Ocean. One may fly as an appetiser before dinner, between courses or after the demi-tasse. In addition the aviator will do a number of thrilling stunts in the plane for the entertainment of the diners, all of whom will be able to watch the plane while eating. Manager Dodge has received a number of requests from persons who wish to make flights in the planes.

BOLSHEVISM ON TRIAL

"Bolshevism on Trial" is the title of the screen production that is announced for a brief engagement at Tremont Temple beginning on Monday matinee, June 9. This production, which is the timeliest story ever screened and replete with tense and vitally interesting scenes, is based upon the novel, "Comrades," by Thomas Dickson, Jr. No greater or truer picture has ever appeared upon the screen; no greater warning to the American people than that contained in the thrilling tale of a group of Americans who brought chaos out of peace, ruin out of stability and misery out of happiness. The picture not only furnishes an abundance of entertainment but is a vital lesson that should reach the homes of every true and patriotic American. It is the sort of picture that gives out something to think about. The picture is thrilling and deeply absorbing and contains as an underground current a heart appealing love story. It depicts vividly the life of a socialistic community where socialism becomes bolshevism, and liberty, license. The picture is not a war picture and has absolutely nothing to do with the war.

COLONIAL THEATRE

Again has David W. Griffith given a production that is destined to mark a distinctive advancement in the cinema art in his "Broken Blossoms," which begins its second week at the Colonial Theatre. This time he has framed a romance of the Orient and London's oriental district, basing his story upon a tale by Thomas Burke's book, "Limehouse Nights." With his genius for construction of plot and picturing, as well as direction of action Mr. Griffith has given full meaning to the designation, masterpiece, as applied to his product. And not only in supremacy of production has he practiced his rare arts, but he has gone further afield to so present his production that it will have full effect and give maximum impressment. To this end he has combined in prologue to the enrolling diversions of the speaking stage supplemented by musical accompaniment that in combination and effects which give sensations never before possible in the theatre.

BARNUM-RINGLING

Election day falls on the first of every month in the "Clown Alley" tents of the great, new Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Shows Combined. Al Misco, dean of all the clowns in clowndand, calls the convention to order just after the big street parade has returned to the circus grounds.

It is then that the "joke editor" is elected for the ensuing thirty days. It becomes the duty of this official to buy all the newspapers procurable and to read them religiously. Whenever he comes upon a topic which might serve for an up-to-date parody or humorous caricature he puts it aside. Every afternoon at 1 o'clock there is a meeting of what is known as the "sawdust senate." This is composed of a committee of 20 clowns selected from the entire army of jesters. The "editor" makes his report to this body and they discuss it and select those ideas which may be turned to account on the hippodrome track.

This is the secret of the down-to-the-minute performances of the skylarkers. There is not a fad of dress, dance or unusual innovation which they do not portray in some ludicrous manner.

These droll fellows represent the pick of the world's most famous sawdust comedians. They include all of the producing clowns that have this season been merged into one gigantic institution.

Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Combined will exhibit here for one week commencing Monday, June 9 at the Huntington avenue grounds.

GAIETY THEATRE

Return of Boston's Favorite Burlesque. The new edition of "The Maids of America" at the Gayety Theatre, commencing next Monday matinee. The performance is said to be different from them customarily offered in this diversion of amusements, not lonly in respect of the merit of the book, but in the manner in which the specialties and the book, but in the manner in which the specialties and the musical numbers are introduced. At intervals throughout the performance, these features are brought out as consistent parts of the story instead of being dragged in haphazardly. Throughout the two acts, there is a long program of vaudeville specialties and musical numbers that are said to possess the charm of novelty and that provide agreeable diversity to the entertainment.

"A VOICE IN THE DARK"

"A Voice in the Dark" is the interesting title of the play which will be presented at the Park Square Theatre for a visit beginning Monday night, June 9. A. H. Woods stands sponsor for the piece, which was written by Ralph E. Dyar and Willard Mack and which is described as the most remarkable and original dramatic novelty on the American stage. That it is a big attraction scenically is indicated in the knowledge that no less than nine scenes are required for the unfolding of its plot, which is said to be a thrilling and intense one from beginning to end.

In the cast are Olive Wyndham, Willard Mack, William B. Mack, Florine Arnold, Frank Monroe, Arline Hackett and many others.

"OPEN YOUR EYES"

"Open your Eyes," a government film drama with a mission, will open a Boston engagement at the Shubert Theatre June 9. The picture, made under supervision of the government health authorities, and with the sanction of the American Medical Association, was recently given a private showing here before an audience of health specialists, social workers, State and city officials, and dramatic editors, all of whom pronounced it not only a drama of more than passing interest, beautifully filmed, but also a production which cannot help being a beneficent factor in the community. The picture, which will be shown twice daily, is addressed to women as well as to men, and will be presented before mixed audiences. It deals with the problems of social disease, not as a lecture on the subject, but as a powerful human interest story.

ORPHEUM THEATRE

The vaudeville and motion picture bills to be shown at the Orpheum Theatre the coming six days offer many novelties and pleasurable items. For the first half of the week there will be as headliner Adelaide Bell and her Jass Band in a spectacular display of syncopated melodies and dances. Miss Bell was formerly a leading entertainer with the Ziegfeld Louder show, the Century Grove, New York, and with the Ziegfeld Follies, and her act carries special interest on this account. Others to appear are Alexander and Fields, in songs and comedy; the great Howard, accomplished ventriloquist, in a novel spectacle entitled "Spirit Entanglements;" Jewett and Elgin, in dancing exhibitions, and Kinzo, Oriental entertainer. On the screen there will be shown the latest news pictures, the first showing of a new Mr. and Mrs. Drew comedy, and Norma Talmadge in "The New Moon," in which she is pictured as a Russian nobleswoman impoverished by the revolution, who leads a band of women to combat rebel Bolsheviki with many a thrilling adventure.

BLANCHE SWEET PLAYS DUAL ROLE IN "THE UNPARDONABLE SIN"

A scene from the screen version of Rupert Hughes' famous story, "The Unpardonable Sin," at the Majestic.

CHIVALRY OF CHINA SHOWN IN MOVIE

In D. W. Griffith's masterpiece of photoplay making, "Broken Blossoms," now at the Colonial Theatre, there are some striking scenes showing the picturesque China that the poet Cheng Huan knew before he left the land of plum blossoms to settle down in the muck of Pennyfields and the dock district of London's East End. One of these scenes shows a kindly old Mandarin, who stops his "sedan," or sedan chair, to distribute sweetmeats and "cash" to a bevy of richly dressed chinese maidens.

The camera cannot tell you all the truth about China, but Mr. Griffith was quick to see that something of the truth, the contrast between the kindly treatment accorded children by the Chinese, and the brutality, viciousness and unthinking cruelty meted out to the children of the poor in London, had to be drawn, so as to emphasize the naturalness of the Chinese chivalry that made Cheng Huan inevitably care for little twelve-year-old Lucy, after her beast of a father, Battling Barrows, had driven her from his wretched one-room home.

Nothing could be more pitiable than the condition of the children who have to live through "Limehouse Nights" in London. In Mr. Griffith's latest picture you are made to see the awful environment of these children, the noisome alleys, the wretched rooms, the calls to vice. This "Christian" treatment of the little ones is in sharp contrast to the "heathen" attitude toward youngsters in America.

Studying Russian Ballet

Norma Talmadge has become so imbued with Russian atmosphere since she finished her latest picture, "The New Moon," that she has taken to the Russian ballet and is now studying classical dancing and Russian ballet with Adolf Bolm.

Mr. Bolm came to this country with the Serge Diagheleff Ballet Russe and remained here after Nijinski and the others went to Australia, to produce several operas at the Metropolitan Opera House.

Miss Talmadge is at present taking two lessons a week, and as soon as she is far enough advanced in her work will form a little class, including her little sister Constance, Anita Loos and Mercita Esmonde, known in private life as Mrs. Harry Northrup, which will take four lessons a week. Miss Talmadge insists it is not a fad and says that ever since she played the part of the youthful dancer in a former picture she has been determined to make a serious study of the dance, and now that the opportunity affords itself she is going to take advantage of it.

"The New Moon" will be shown at the Orpheum Theatre the first half of next week.

Miss Clark Can Cook

Although the requirements of her role in "Come Out of the Kitchen," her latest photoplay, which will be displayed at the Beacon Theatre next week demands that she be ignorant of the art of cooking, Marguerite Clark is a past mistress of the science of cuisine as all who have enjoyed collations prepared by her dainty hands, have substantial reason to know.

Miss Clark has a splendidly equipped kitchen in her New York home and when she is busy with some gastronomic chef d'oeuvre, it is highly indiscreet to ask her to come out of the kitchen until her work is done. But in "Come Out of the Kitchen," Miss Clark is seen as an aristocratic Virginia girl who finds it necessary to assume the role of a cook, but while her accomplishments in this line are nil, she manages to win the love of a rich Northerner, which, after all, proved the best thing she could have done.

Our Home Bolsheviks

One of the most unusual pictures that has ever appeared upon the screen, "Bolshevism on Trial," will be presented for the first time in Boston next Monday matinee, June 9, at the Tremont Temple. This picture is thrilling, absorbing and timely, with a beautiful love story running throughout it.

It depicts vividly the life of a Socialistic community where Socialism becomes Bolshevism and liberty, license. The picture is not a war picture; it has absolutely nothing to do with the war. It does not deal with Bolshevism as it exists on the other side of the Atlantic, but with Bolshevism as it is in our own country. Excellently directed, it shows vividly that with the spread of Bolshevism our country would become ravaged and desolate like bleeding Russia. The cast is excellent, each being eminently fitted for the role he or she portrays. "Bolshevism on Trial" is a combination of an entertainment and a lesson. It gives you something to think about—something in which every man and woman in this country is at present whole-heartedly interested in. The future of our country depends upon the solving of this great problem.

Location Tricks

It's a wise director that knows his own picture, these days, and it's a wiser audience who can tell whether the Sahara desert is really the Sahara or somebody's backyard in New Jersey, so cleverly have the motion picture people disguised the exteriors of their pictures.

You cannot tell when you see a picture of the Thames River whether it was really photographed in London, or a part of the canal at Venice, California. The same way with the mountains, ocean and many, many other localities.

But this is not the case in "Eyes of the World," playing at the Shubert Theatre. The script calls for all California scenery and every bit is real California outdoors. The outdoors we have all heard so much about and longed to see with our own eyes. Well, here is our chance, for the director in making this superpicture, took his company into the wildest nooks and crannies of this country. Almost to the timber line they went, and some of the scenes were photographed thousands of feet in the air.

EASTERN STEAMSHIP LINES

While the past week has proven a banner week for the Metropolitan line, between Boston and New York, and the Bongor line, which opened last Monday and received generous patronage, the same cannot be said of the Portland division, which for some reason, has been a disappointment. This has been the case ever since its resumption, both in freight and passenger travel, and now the question is asked on all sides, what is the matter with the Portland traffic? There is certainly every facility for passengers on this Eastern Steamship division.

When the Portland Line was discontinued last year there was some doubt as to the resumption of this branch of the service this year and strong protest was entered by the Chamber of Commerce in Portland, but now it can be fairly said the Portland Division of the Eastern Steamship Lines is running at a loss and if the line is to be continued it behooves Boston and Portland business interests to make a move towards an increase of patronage, both of freight and passenger traffic.

On the Metropolitan Division, where the steamships Northland and Belfast make daily trips between Boston and New York, traffic is most satisfactory and these fast steamers make the journey between the two cities oftentimes in less than four-teen hours.

BEACON THEATRE

Out of the announcement of the bill of photoplays to be shown for the first time in Boston through the week at the Beacon Theatre the conclusion is to be drawn that the management was not content with giving the supreme in quality, but also served the ends of quantity. David W. Griffith's latest screen production, "True Heart Susie," will be shown with the favorites of his studio, Lillian Gish and Robert Harron, heading the cast. This is a pastoral story of the mighty love for a heedless and not too-clever young man by a self-sacrificing girl who never allows him to know her sentiments. This sacrifice reaches to the heights, and she lives her life with love never returned.

OUTING OF FILM MEN

The annual outing of the motion picture industry people, which includes members of the Exhibitors' League of Massachusetts and the Exchange Managers' Association of New England, will be held this season at Pemberton on Tuesday, June 10.

'OPEN YOUR EYES' IS MORAL LESSON FOR GIRLS

Scene from "Open Your Eyes,' the government film drama, coming to the Shubert.

"Open Your Eyes," the government film drama to be shown at the Shubert Theatre beginning June 5, should prove of special interest to women, because it deals with things and situations of which the vast majority of women are unaware. The government experts who produced this picture, and the members of the United States Public Health Service, which has indorsed it, had this fact in mind in the preparation of the scenes. The theme of the drama, the dangers of social diseases is one which under present day conditions is as vital to mothers and their daughters as to fathers and their sons, and "Open Your Eyes" should do a world of good in educating the public to this menace.

No mother could more delicately explain to her daughter the functions of motherhood than this picture planned especially for the purpose by government health experts and a corps of physicians. Nor could the horrors of social disease be impressed on a young woman's mind more indelibly, or in a more helpful manner than through the medium of this moving screen drama. A view of "Open Your Eyes" will answer the unasked questions of the young woman better than the average parent is able to do. In view of the laxity of many in teaching their children the vital facts of dangers to be shunned, the mission of this picture is a most important one. And the most pleasing feature of it is that the knowledge is imparted through the medium of a story filled with strong and unforgetable situations.

The much discussed screen version of Major Rupert Hughes' famous story, "The Unpardonable Sin," a story that aroused the opposition of the New York Public Library, and caused the late Colonel Roosevelt to spring to its defence, will be shown for a season at the Majestic Theatre beginning next Monday, June 3. Those whose tastes run to love and romance in screen productions will like "The Unpardonable Sin." Those who get their pleasure from big thrills provided by stirring action will like it; in fact, there is in the picture something that will appeal to all.

The story has been spoken of as one of the most powerful tales of love and adventure that has ever been written, and reviews of the picture made by competent critics throughout the country say that here is one of those rare instances when the photoplay version is even more powerful and gripping than the original narrative.

"The Unpardonable Sin" has a war background—but it is anything but a war picture. Its greatest interest lies in the recital of the love and adventures of two typical Americans—one a plucky little California girl, and the other a young college man from the Middle West. Blanche Sweet, widely known screen star, makes the most of splendid opportunities offered her in the role of the girl, and Matt Moore plays opposite her as the young collegian. The play is full of action from the start, and two youngsters impersonating boy scouts supply much genuine comedy.

The manner in which Harry Garson produced "The Unpardonable Sin," the screen version of Major Rupert Hughes' famous story, which will be shown at the Majestic Theatre June 2, evidences the fact that the greatest care has been taken in every single scene. Readers of the book will easily recognize the story in its film form. In the matter of construction, detail, filling and every essential point that goes to make a perfect picture no expense has been spared. Many hours were spent on single scenes that take but a few seconds on the screen.

Blanche Sweet, who is seen in the leading role—the two leading roles, in fact, for she portrays two sisters—returns to her screen followers in the finest characterization of her career.

One incident in the play stands out prominently as perhaps the finest bit of double exposure photography ever made. There is a shot at Miss Sweet asleep, with the door of the room opening to let in the sister of the sleeping girl. Miss Sweet comes across the room, walks toward the bed and the shadow of the moving sister falls over the figure of the girl in the bed.

This is the first time in the history of motion picture photography that such an effect has been known to be perfected. Many other similarly novel bits are seen throughout the play.

GLOBE THEATRE

The two bills of photoplays announced for the week at the Globe Theatre gives promise of unusually good pleasure to this popular theatre's many patrons. For the first half of the week the initial Boston showings will be given of Norma Talmadge, in "The New Moon." This is a thrilling and dramatic modern romance in which the gifted star is seen as a Russian princess who becomes a peasant girl and the leader of a band of women who refuse to obey the request issued by the Revolutionists. It is an absorbing drama, that is said to draw upon the artist's best educational gifts. The accompanying photoplay will show Montagu Love, in "Through the Toils." As an added measure there will be presented, also for the first time, Mr. and Mrs. Drew's latest comedy.

COLUMBIA THEATRE

The daily change of photoplays through the week at Loew's Columbia Theatre will bring appealing programs. The list includes Hex Ilesch's "The Brand," Jane Gray in "When My Ship Comes In," Bessie Barriscale in "The Cast Off," Viola Dana in "Satan Jr."; Norma Talmadge in "The New Moon," Mary Pickford in "Capt. Kidd, Jr."; June Elvidge in "The Social Pirate."

TREMONT THEATRE

"Fin-Fin" at the Tremont enters upon its seventh week, still in full flush of favor as a seasonable attraction, its brightness and sparkle of melody and tuneful of dancing give spirit to the action, and the colorfulness of dressing to scenery and costume supply backgrounds that so please the eye, they intensify the pleasure exceedingly. The principals fit well into their requirements in song and comicalities, and the ladies of the chorus, termed "the perfect thirty-six beauties," fulfill their office to good effect. Most especially do the latter shine in the lingerie parade, which, as the production specializes in the exploitation of ladies' wear, gives them opportunity to wear a bewildering collection of feminine finery for all occasions of a busy day. The Tremont theatre-goers continue to show their liking for it bespeaks its specially good qualities.

KEITH'S THEATRE

Irene Bordoni, the delightful French artist, and Gilda Rice, a lieutenant of the first Canadian contingent that went to France in the fight for liberty, are the headliners at Keith's this week. Since coming to America Miss Bordoni has become a star and she will sing in this appearance many new songs by Gilda Rice, who is the best song writer of the war period.

Another feature of the bill will be the appearance of the only Billy Reeves, international star, in a farce called "The Right Key, but the Wrong Flat." The rest of the bill includes Burns and Frabito, in a few comedy, Jimmy Dutton and company, in player feats, Frankee Woods and Dan Mason, with a satire, Jim Fulton, in a Western farce, McMahon and Diamond in "Some Bull," Pete and Florence Mack, in a novelty, and the Flying Mayos. News features are also part of the program.

COPLEY THEATRE

The Henry Jewett Players will present "Nobe" for the first time at the Copley Theatre on Monday evening, opening the summer season there. "Nobe" is a farce by Harry Arthur Saintsbury and Paulton, with Peter Anos Dunn, a clever old practical business man, and Nobe, widow of the late Amphion King of Thebes, as its central personality. Its humor is said to be of the ancient classical legend of "Pygmalion and Galatea" best known to playgoers through W. S. Gilbert's play of that name but the play wrights treat the subject in a fashion entirely their own, the classical is mixed and seriously. During the first act, a statue in the home of Peter Anos Dunn is converted to life, and the complications that ensue are productive of unlimited fun-making. Nobe has not been acted in Boston or many years.

H. Conway Wingfield will appear as Peter Anos Dunn, and Jessamine Newcombe as Nobe.

HAP'S NEW HOME

Hap Ward, known the country over as one of the greatest comedians, has opened a new club house at Lynnfield, Mass. The Wardhurst Club, which he has named it, has already made a decidedly big hit with the hundreds of visitors who have visited the Wardhurst to date. It is located in a beautiful grove of pine all the earmarks of being the most inspiring scenery in the state. Hap Ward knows music. He has behind the footlights back in these days for entertainments and now in his beautiful ballroom and decidedly big cabaret show. Decoration Day will find many vaudeville and stage celebrities there.

WALDORF THEATRE

There is a wealth of attractions in the bill of vaudeville acts and photoplay subjects announced for the week at the Waldorf Theatre. And as a special inducement to those who resort to indoor amusements the cool auditorium of this theatre assures comfort and pleasure to all. For the first half there will be presented Tony Williams and company in the popular comedy skit, "The Breadjuy Handiman." Lee Stoddart, comedian and mimic, and the Charlotte, in songs and comedy. Wire and Walker, in an athletic novelty. On the screen there will be shown the latest news photo-faces, a comedy and "The Girl of Mr. Perkins," featuring Billie Rhodes. This is announced as a charming romance with the gifted star pictured to a charm. The first half for the last half will include Maynard and Scarth, in their song and comedy sketch, "Around the Corner." Joe Maxwell and company, in the singing sketch, "The Fire Chief."

MURAD

THE TURKISH CIGARETTE

YOU can throw any kind of light on Murad, and find them 100% pure Turkish tobacco, the world's most famous tobacco for cigarettes. It is this famous tobacco that makes Murad the famous cigarette.

"You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear." Neither can you make a real enjoyable cigarette out of any other than Turkish tobacco.

People!—listen to this talk—it's all for your good. It's your money you're spending.

It is true that "ordinary" cigarettes cost a trifle less.

GO FEAST YOUR EYES!

THAT'S THE TIP FROM THE TRANSLUCENT TRANSCRIPT, WHICH SPEAKS ABOUT

AL JOLSON IN SINBAD

THUSLY:

DEFER not a pleasure when it can be had; for fortune often destroyeth our plans.
FIFTY maidens and a hundred more inhabit the Opera House, and all of them comely;
AND labad, none other than Jolson, enlivens the purlieus of Huntington Avenue—
HE who is witty and full of frolic and singeth songs not like another.
BUT as the merry and mournful rites of temple at Pfluh
ARE sung by the heat-crazed zealots from the desert of Zhush.
AND the Palace of Sinbad is there, and the magic of Bagdad makes itself known.
NOR are the stately beauties absent — they who come from Babylon—
LIKE Leazah and Cunigriv. Not to speak of butterflies five feet tall.
MUCH dancing there is; and a shipwreck; and the grief-killing antics of Yttik.
AND much besides. Oh ye fortunates—for whose place Cantabrigian sophomores would pay large price.
KNOW that one waits for you at the stage-door. Go feast your eyes. My advice is judicious.

"Nazimova" the star of the screen who recently was a big success in "Out of the Fog," an interesting story taken from Cape Ann, a section of the Massachusetts coast, is again to appear in the movies in Boston. At the Boston Theatre next week she will appear in "The Red Lantern." This picture, according to the advance information sent out, is the most successful one she has ever appeared in.

The vaudeville bill includes Wright and Dietrich, a team that went overseas and amused the boys in a military singing and dancing novelty; Colonel Diamond and Granddaughter in modern dances; Simmons and Brantley, in a roller skating novelty; Ezra Mathews and company in one of Will Cressy's sketches, "Quick Action," and Mateio Beneoni, the celebrated violinist.

MODERN THEATRE

David Wark Griffith will have two photoplays on the light for the first time in Boston within the week, one of which was launched at a first-class theatre last Wednesday, and the other will be unveiled at the Modern Theatre throughout the week. Its title is "True Heart Susie," and the all-star cast featured includes Robert Warren and Lillian Gish. It is a pastoral story to which the master has turned his pen, and it might fittingly be subtitled "A Hoosier Romance." It concerns a girl of the country side in love with a young man whom with hidden resources she aids in educating at college, all for love. He, never sensing the source of this aid, gets a degree, becomes a clergyman and comes back to his home town a massive self-conceit withholding his

Jilted Man Equal to Occasion; He Weds Another

Harrisburg, Pa., May 3.—Joseph Solar, of Steelton, with his best man and an assemblage of friends, waited long at the Serbian Orthodox Church here for the appearance of Maria Toller, the bride-elect, when a message came that she had decided not to marry him and had left the city.

Solar told the gathering that it was not his wish to disappoint them. They had come to see a wedding, the Rev. Dr. J. Hrubovich was already frocked for the ceremony, a wedding feast was all prepared. All that was needed was a bride. If somebody would produce her the ceremony would go on.

In a short time Teresa Chasa was presented. She said she was willing to marry Solar if he would have her. It was perfectly agreeable to him and after a marriage license was hastily taken out the couple were wedded.

HEROES' GROVE SUGGESTED BY HEARST PAPER

Impressive Ceremonies at Golden Gate Park, San Francisco, in Dedication of Project

San Francisco, Cal., May 31.—The Grove of Heroes, the dedication of which on Memorial Day was pronounced the most impressive public ceremony [illegible] Pacific Coast inspired by [illegible] a project that was initiated by The San Francisco Examiner.

The idea of a living monument to the men who had given their lives for their country in the great war was first suggested to the people of San Francisco in an editorial published in The Examiner on May 17.

The response was immediate and widespread, men and women in all stations of life acclaiming the idea and co-operating with the Hearst organization in San Francisco in seeing it realized.

GOLDEN GATE PARK CHOSEN.

Mayor Rolph, members of the board of supervisors and the board of park commissioners officially adopted the idea for the municipality and selected the site in Golden Gate Park where the multitude assembled for the dedicatory exercises.

The planting of the trees in the grove, one for each of the San Francisco soldiers, sailors and marines who made the supreme sacrifice will be under the direction of John McLaren, superintendent of Golden Gate Park.

Here are excerpts from the editorial in The Examiner that led the people of San Francisco to join hands in the undertaking which has been lauded by the American Forestry Association and numerous patriotic organizations throughout the country:

START OF THE PROJECT.

"Sons of San Francisco are sleeping in strange graveyards overseas. They rest under the soil from which they helped to the last extremity to make lives to hurl forth the invader. Their mounds over there, San Francisco's offering before the Altar of Liberty, must ever be shrines for us at home.

* * *

"The Examiner this morning makes this suggestion—that the moment to be in fact a living one consisting of a grove of trees to be, laid out in Golden Gate Park, a tree for every son of San Francisco who made the supreme gift of his life for his beloved land.

* * *

"Memorial Day will soon be here. A solemn day it will be this year. Thousands of names have been added to the long list upon the nation's honor roll.

"We suggest that the big feature of this day be a fitting ceremony that shall start into life San Francisco's living monument to her newest soldier dead—the Grove of Heroes."

Montana, testified that they were approached on Bowdoin street by Clark, who said to Knowlton: "You look good to me," and then offered to buy liquor for them. ARREST MAY SOLVE DEATH OF HERMIT

Concord, N. H., May 31.—The mysterious murder of Dennis Clifford, the aged hermit of Hooksett, who was slain last Fall, may be explained, the authorities believe, as the result of a recent arrest. John McCormick of Worcester was brought here today on a warrant charging robbery, and is believed to be in possession of certain knowledge regarding the crime.

The authorities are maintaining silence following the arrest of McCormick, but are known to believe that the hunt begun last Fall for the slayer of the Hooksett farmer is nearing its end.

McCormick was taken from a basement at No. 80 Myrtle street, Worcester, where he had been living since last March. He was working in a Worcester greenhouse, but most of the time during the last few years has worked as a lumberman in the Maine and New Hampshire logging camps.

At the time that the Hooksett hermit was murdered McCormick's whereabouts are not known, unless the detectives who have been following him for some months.

The body of Clifford, who was 67 years old, was found on the floor of the bedroom of the farmhouse he occupied alone. His head had been crushed with a hammer, and his body bruised with a club, both weapons being found on the floor.

Search was made for him only after the cries of a starving horse in his stable had attracted the suspicions of neighbors.

OLD-FASHIONED GIRL WANTS A HUSBAND

One Good Old-Fashioned Girl wants a husband. J. R. Clayton of Brockton, who wants a "Good Old-Fashioned Girl" for a wife, please take notice.

This G. O. P. G. has no fears of being an old maid, prefers such a solitary state to an unhappy married existence, scorns the idea of divorce and separations, and abhors the very idea of modern dancing and kindred frivolities. Even the "moderate drinker" is taboo from her list.

She is twenty-five years of age, works for a large manufacturing concern, and in her spare moments helps her grandmother with the household duties. She believes that most young people rush too lightly into such a sacred question as matrimony.

An emphatic postscript states: "I do not dance, as I think it is the devil's best invention to draw poor human beings to hell, especially the so-called modern dances!"

JEWISH LEADERS WILL BE HEARD MONDAY

Will Ask U. S. Protest Against Massacres at House Committee Session

JEWISH MASSACRE RESOLUTION BEFORE CONGRESS.

"Whereas, it is reported that innocent men, women and children, particularly of the Jewish faith, are being outraged and massacred in Poland, Rumania and Galicia,

"Resolved, That the Department of State be, and hereby is, directed to communicate such reports to the President of the United States and request that he confer with the representatives at the Peace Conference of the countries where such outrages and massacres are reported to occur and inform them that this body and the American people generally deeply deplore acts of violence and cruelty committed against men, women and children of race or religion."

Washington, May 31.—Representative Jewish leaders will appear Monday before the House Foreign Affairs Committee to urge prompt and favorable action on a resolution expressing the horror and condemnation of the American Congress over reported Jewish massacres in Europe.

They will ask that President Wilson intervene in behalf of the persecuted Jews and notify the representatives of countries in which Jewish massacres have taken place recently and who are now in Paris attending the peace conference, that such persecutions must cease under penalty of forfeiture of the friendship of the United States.

As the Foreign Affairs Committee has been called into special session to consider the appeals it was thought probable today that Congress would be called on immediately to act in the matter. Representatives Siegel, Lagaurdia and Goldfogle, all of New York, were actively at work to secure the passage of the protesting resolution.

Greatest resentment has been expressed by Jewish leaders over reported massacres in the newly formed governments that come into being mainly through the efforts of the representatives of the United States at the Paris peace conference.

President Wilson, in a cablegram Wednesday to Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York, gave assurance that "safeguards against religious discrimination will be embodied in arrangements by which the new states are set up."

"BOOKMAKING" ON INCREASE IN BOSTON

"Bookmaking" on the horse races is increasing to an alarming extent in Boston, police officials stated in Municipal Court yesterday during charges against Daniel D. Mack of the West End. They stated that Mack and his kind usually had their "offices" in saloons and barber shops, but the closing of business for the holiday drove them to the street. Mack's case was continued until Wednesday, as was that of J. S. W. Sheeney of the West End, charged with loitering and being idle and disorderly.

British Women Admit 'Familiarity'--Deny Lowered Morals

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE.
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

London, May 31.—Justice Darling's assertion from the bench of Old Bailey that "our women differ by heaven's breath from what their mothers were" has raised a storm of resentment against the implication that British women's morals have been lowered since the war.

Lady Muir Mackenzie, in an interview, said:

"Almost every day some man assumes the prerogative of criticising women in the most sweeping terms. I think the time has come when such should put their own house in order.

"Justice Darling says evidence of the moral relaxation of women can be seen in a walk down any street, but if the conduct of women is unseemly the men are equally blameworthy.

"I have no knowledge of any lowering of the national moral sense. I think women have emerged splendidly from the sorrows and trials of war.

Mrs. Elizabeth Coulter Crooks, one of the most prominent of British women leaders, said:

"I am willing to admit none of us is quite so particular about our conduct as before the war, but it is a long step from more familiar manners to lowered morals.

"Women were forced to abandon the old standards of modesty during their war service while they were working under the roughest conditions alongside of men. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, if some of them have lost their old reticence of behavior to a considerable degree, but I deny they have sacrificed woman's most cherished possession—chastity."

G. O. P. WORKS ON TARIFF REVISION

Washington, May 31.—Republicans "will grind out tariff protection for every American-made commodity," Representative Fordney, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, announced here. Hearings on proposed tariff legislation will commence about June 20, and the Ways and Means Committee already has started "putting the tariff bill together," Fordney added.

Solid opposition to any upward revision of tariff schedules from the Democrats is not anticipated by Chairman Fordney, who was inclined to believe that there will be a considerable amount of support for the Republican measures from the Democratic side of the chamber.

PENN TEAM FAVORED IN MEET

Red and Blue Sends Selected Men Into Final Events—Johnson Real Sensation

QUALIFYING TOTALS

Penn	16	Georgetown	4
Michigan	12	Tech	3
Cornell	10	Syracuse	2
Harvard	8	Bowdoin	2
Dartmouth	8	Columbia	2
Princeton	7	Pittsburgh	2
Rutgers	6	Maine	1

With two intercollegiate champions of the 1918 season beheaded, Felter of Cornell, broad jumper, and Firor of John Hopkins, high jumper, more title holders were due for the bone yard this afternoon when the finals of the forty-third annual track meet is finished in the Harvard Stadium.

Both victors of last year failed to qualify among the first six men in their class, and are out of the meet.

The fine times for the runs yesterday, as well as the all-around good marks set up in practically every event, assured the track fans of one James dandy time this afternoon.

The men resume their combat at 2 o'clock.

Pennsylvania, with sixteen qualifiers, was looked upon as the logical champion, but Jack Moakley of Cornell—has one or two trumps up his sleeve.

JOHNSON WHOLE TEAM.

Michigan, with its eight men, had twelve places to show, but the downfall of Lawrie Butler, in the quarter mile, and a questionable action by Coach Farrell in keeping Carl Johnson, the best athlete in the meet, out of the high hurdles, when Captain Krdman of Princeton, title holder in both timbers last year, was unable to compete, appears to have killed the Wolverine's chances to take the hunting West.

Johnson, a team in himself, may turn the trick himself, however, in a dramatic finish.

It is practically certain that the Western star, with his double kick, that brought him 23 feet, 10½ inches in the broad jump, has already clinched that title. In addition he made 5 feet, 11¼ inches in the high jump, his qualifying test, and won his heats in the low hurdles and 100-yard dash without opposition.

Captain Haymond of Penn is running in his 1918 form, and looks like the winner in the 220. Hillis, brother of Harvard, Haymond and Johnson are going to make a tidy bunch of scores in the century with the winner a toss-up.

MAYER BEARS WATCHING.

Captain Shea should hold his quarter-mile title, but Kurt Mayer of Cornell may bury Charley Shaw of Columbia, 1918 victor, in the "810." Cornell thanks re-inforcements, has a chance to clean up the hurdles, its distance men, however, must come through to send Moakley back to Ithaca happy.

The "half-dead" Captain Jim Braden, whose clash with the Bolshevistic New Haveniten must have been a mental bobble for best shot put record, 46 feet 5¾ inches, and if the Yale captain had lost an ounce, instead of merely dislocating a shoulder, he might have made 150 feet. Who knows?

The mile and two-mile runs were to be decided in one heat. Lorimer Hartford of Lafayette was the favorite to win, and displace Walter Kleinspehn, the 1918 title holder, as the class of the mate. Captain Ivan Dresser of Cornell will have to defend his title against Bob McPhillips of Princeton and Captain Sedgwick of Michigan.

THREE STARS ON BROOKLINE HIGH NINE

BIKE RIVALS IN SPECIAL PACED RACE

George Wiley and Vincent Madonna, two of the top-notch pace followers, come together in a special 25-mile match race in the feature event at the first of the regular Saturday night races at the Revere cycle track tonight.

Both men are in fine condition, as shown by their racing on the holiday when Madonna led the field at the opening of the new bike track at Cranston, while Wiley made a runaway of his contest at the old beach oval.

The contest tonight is being staged at Madonna's request. The little Italian is after the premier honors in the paced game this year and intends to take the top position as early as possible by defeating all his dangerous opponents in the early part of the season and therefore pile up enough points to have easy sailing later.

In addition to the paced race tonight the regular card of amateurs and professional events will be run off.

Wiley proved entirely too fast for George Bokker and Frank Corry in the big twenty-five-mile unpaced race, which featured the season's opening at the Revere oval, winning the event in 50:47 flat.

Wiley was so good that his two rivals quit when they saw they had no chance for first money. The Syracuse rider's time was 39 minutes.

Frank Keenan of Revere won the miles-and-out race for amateurs; Pat Logan of South Boston took the two-mile professional open; John Fardig of Orient Heights annexed the three-quarter mile professional handicap; Louis Kali of Revere landed the half-mile amateur handicap, and Michael Siminators of Woburn was first in the half-mile novice.

A big crowd turned out and the sport was in keeping with all of Manager Huller's past biff bobbig shows.

DEMPSEY IS B. C. STAR IN VICTORY ON TRACK

Bill (Dimo) Dempsey, favored for the captaincy of next year's Boston College track team, and Jake Driscoll starred in the dual meet with Springfield Y. M. C. A. College at University Heights, which B. C. captured, 69-51. Dempsey took the 1200 in 1:23-5-5, and hung up a new record for Alumni Field in the broad jump, negotiating 21 ft. 11½ in.

Driscoll, though running with his left ankle in a splint, took the quarter in 51 4-5. As was expected, Boston College cleaned up in the track events and finished first while Springfield had the edge in the other field events. Steitz cleared the bar easily at 6 ft. 1 in. in the high jump. Phil Corrigan took first honors in the low hurdles and second in the "100" for Boston College.

Brazil Eleven Victors

Rio Janeiro, May 31.—The Brazilian team won the soccer championship of South America by defeating Uruguay, 3-0. Brazil scored in an extra period.

Wesleyan-Green Nines Clash

Middletown, Ct., May 31.—The Wesleyan and Dartmouth baseball teams were to cross bats here this afternoon.

George Kelly, heavy hitter and speedy outfielder.

Finnity McMahon, one of the best of schoolboy pitchers.

Frank Ball, team's crack catcher.

BROOKLINE HIGH, although at present in the second division in the Suburban Baseball League race, has a nine that will be up higher before the season is over.

The team is made up entirely of "green" players, and after their nervousness wears off they are sure to show improved speed.

Harry Mallowney and Finnity McMahon are two of the best southpaws in the league, and George Kelly, an outfielder, who has just become eligible, will be able to go in the box in emergencies.

Mallowney has a record of sixty-one strikeouts in four games this season. He has a world of speed, wide curves and a good change of speed. His only weakness is that he has a tendency to be wild at times.

McMahon is so close to his running mate it is hard to say which is the better batsman.

O'Hearn and Ball have been doing the best work with the bat up to date.

Charley O'Hearn, who has played in eleven games, has made but two errors, a great record for a third baseman.

The team has been shifted around quite a lot by Coach Parker and the lineup at present reads: Ball, catcher; Kenny, first base; Ginney, Second base; Twine, short; O'Hearn, third base; Johnson, left field; Kelly, center field; Taylor, right field.

This team looks to be the best put on the field by Brookline so far this season and should come through with a winning brand of ball.

PHILLIES PLAY FINAL WITH THE BRAVES

Double Holiday Victory Gives the Stallings Clan New Hope for Coming Games

Looks as if the Braves were off, good folks.

They have collected four victories in a row, and in so doing have developed a whole flock of real baseball. The team is hitting, hitting hard. They peeled off twenty-seven hits in yesterday's double triumph, more than they have been making in a week.

They are beginning to make the "breaks" come their way, also, as is the case with an outfit on a victory streak. Flnatand, Red Smith was chased out into left field in the morning pastime.

Red had never played the garden, and he hadn't been hitting a lick. But he tore loose a double and two torrid one-shots, and what he did in the field made not the least difference.

POWELL HAS BIG DAY.

Hay Powell had a big afternoon, and is looking more and more like the star he should be. He has been hitting and his confidence and pep is all back.

The Rabbit,' too, has all his old speed back, while Blackburne has made third a very difficult corner for hits to bias past. Lena, too, is hitting freer than usual, connecting far more often than has been his wont.

The Phils, of course, do not offer any very tough opposition right now, but the kind of ball the Braves played yesterday and the pitching they had would have beaten the best of them.

Young McQuillan started off like a champion before lunch, and was headed for victory when he was injured. The youngster has a great fast ball, a curve and fair control. In addition he's a ball player, able to hit and field the position.

After the accident Keating went in the front and he was harder to find than the proverbial needle in a hay stack until he had pity and softened up a bit in the last chapter.

BIG CROWD; GREAT SHOW.

Little Mister Rudolph returned to his victory habits in the afternoon before a crowd of 17,000 happy fans. He was hit only four times, never were in the same round, and was safer at all times than the allied cause after the doughboys got into the picture.

Yesterday was proof positive that the Braves will draw well with a winning team, and it's likewise a cinch that the 12,000 left with conviction that the outfit is as good as advance notices indicated.

Jake Northrop was due to get a start this afternoon, unless Pillingim warmed up exceptionally well.

Shanahan was due for a chance to show on Alumni Field, Newton, this afternoon, opposing Hobart of Springfield Y. M. C. A. College. The young star expected to shake off the jinx that has been trailing him, and Boston College was due for recording its seventh straight victory. Play at 3:30 o'clock.

ENGLISH HIGH SQUAD COMPETING AT DURHAM

Durham, N. H., May 31.—The seventh annual interscholastic field and track meet will be held at New Hampshire State College this afternoon with Dedy Academy, Sanborn Seminary, Tilton Seminary and Pinkerton Academy, representing New Hampshire schools, and Maine Central Institute and Boston English High, representing out-of-State schools.

Mitchell School Field Day

The Mitchell Military Boys' School was to hold its annual field day in Billerica this afternoon. All prizes were donated by Harry L. Nason of Boston, president of the school's alumni association.

Boxing News and Notes

George Freeman wants the world to know that he has not been officially removed from the bill at the Fenway A. A. He says that the Board of Directors would have to vote on such an action. Freeman declares he is a member of said Board and that the subject of his ouster has not been brought before that body.

Freeman, however, declares that he informed the powers that be at the Back Bay club over a week ago that he desired to be relieved as matchmaker. Maybe this is why Frank McCarthy, who seems to have charge of things at the Fenway A. A., announced that Freeman was no longer the club's matchmaker.

* * *

McCarthy asserted that he will arrange all bookings in the future. He has an all-star show for next Monday night.

* * *

It was a great disappointment to Lowell fans when Jack Britton ran out of his bout with Young Ahearn. The patrons of the Crescent A. A., who did not care to see Ahearn on against Young Nell, were refunded their admission money. Close ones took advantage of this offer by the club.

* * *

Ahearn has been matched to clash with Jack Brosseau at Montreal next Tuesday night. Brosseau showed in Boston several years ago at the amateur shows at Mechanics Building. At that time he was a lightweight, but has grown into a full-fledged middleweight.

* * *

Charley Parker is busily engaged getting into condition for his twelve-round contest with Phinney Boyle of Lowell, at the Armory A. A. next Tuesday night. When these boys met last, Boyle was awarded the decision. Parker is now out to get a flock of dear old revenge.

Baseball News and Notes

The White Sox sunk a very dangerous rival and increased their own comfortable lead by smattering the Indians in both ends of a double-header. Faber and Williams turned the trick.

* * *

Those Tigers are beginning to loom up as real contenders. They dropped the Browns twice and are knocking at the door of the first division. Dauss and Ehmke took turns pitching four-hit games.

* * *

Hugh McQuillan, youthful Brave pitcher who sprained his ankle in the morning game, will be out for a couple of weeks. He is being boosted by a coming wonder by his fellow players and Stallings.

* * *

Except for a slight hardness of hearing, Captain Charles Lincoln Herzog hasn't any after effects of the rap he got on the bean. He was to be in there this afternoon.

* * *

Patricius Hogan was one of the most popular of the players with the Braves here and carries a flock of good wishes over to New York and his new job. With the Giants hitting Patricius should collect quite a few wins.

* * *

The Giants took a terrible fall out of their pursuers, the Dodgers, turning them back, 4 to 1 and 6 to 5. Somebody has got to put the brakes on the McGraws, or the race will be over along about July 4.

TAD'S TIDBITS

Right from Headquarters

THE people of Madagascar have the quaint custom of sewing buttons on their ears and singing joyous carols when attacked by crocodiles. No doubt they do this to change the subject, says the Kansas City Mail.

AT all municipal elections in the Malayiopik Islands it is customary to chop the new mayor's head down to fit the old mayor's hat, says the Oregon City Star-Chronicle.

WHEN a native Eskimo woman of the Blubberblubber tribe sees the man she wants to marry she bounces a whale tomahawk off his brow. On the handle is inscribed the Eskimo equivalent for "Love and Kisses." The head men of the village then crawl into an igloo and shoot dice for the kerosene oil highballs which they would have done anyway if there hadn't been any Blubberblubber tribe, Eskimo women or tomahawks, says the New Hampshire Times-Reporter.

FAMOUS ALIBIS.

"Aw, gee, I thought the ace was played."

Why Not?

Why not send the St. Louis Cardinals and the Philadelphia Americans to Germany to play off the world's series.

None of them knows yet that they're licked.

Cawn't Be Done.

Asked Young Griffo the other night who the hardest hitter he ever met was. You know Young Griffo, that Australian ghost. Griff was so fast that no one ever got near him. "Well," said Griff, "I cawn't really tell who 'it the 'ardest. Gee, none of 'em ever 'it me."

Canada Cal's Chirps.

The interlocutor then announced that the Corn Juice Quartette would sing: "Still, Still With Thee."

One would think the question whether or not we might sip cocktails as of yore could be decided best by a straw vote.

"All the world's a stage," said Shakespeare; but he forgot to add that one-half the people are passengers on the stage and the other half are holding it up.

Well, it the worst comes to the worst, money can't be tight after July 1st anyway.

Perce P. Cassidy complains of the text books for arithmetic used in the schools. "They are hopelessly out of date," he says. "My son showed me a problem which stated a man had $11, and asked how many tons of coal he could purchase at $5.50 a ton. Now, what boy of ten years ever heard of coal at $5.50 a ton?" writes Perce.

Joe Thomas, the former middleweight champ, sends in this:

Diamond Hill, R. I.

Dear Sir:

I have opened in the beautiful Diamond Hill Village, Rhode Island, an institution that thousands of men have been longing for during the past many years. Have you not often wished to get away from your business for a week or two and rest in a spot where you could enjoy all the comforts and conveniences of your daily life without encountering any of its inconveniences and disadvantages? Have you not frequently felt that you would like to get away to a quiet place for a few days just for a "lay off?"

Yours truly,
JOE THOMAS.

CORBETT'S COLUMN

This is the tenth of a series of articles which Mr. Corbett is writing concerning the pugilistic career of Jake Kilrain, one of the greatest heavyweights that America—or any other country—ever produced.

Jake Kilrain always had a certain contempt for John L. Sullivan's strength—as compared with his own. Sullivan was touted around the world as one of the most powerful battlers of all time. But Kilrain felt that in a slugging-wrestling contest, permitted under London Prize Ring rules, he could master the "champion of champions."

Because of this belief Kilrain opened up with the vicious attack upon Sullivan in their fight in Richburg, Miss., on July 8, 1889. Through the first, second and third rounds he matched strength with Sullivan—and got the worst of it. And then Kilrain decided to heed the counsel of Charley Mitchell, his chief second, and fight along more cautious and scientific lines.

* * *

Champion Scored Heavily With Terrific Blows

Kilrain let Sullivan do the rushing in the fourth and John L. surely set the pace. He chased Jake all around the ring. Finally Sullivan, pounded his body with left handers and Kilrain dropped to the turf. Sullivan then won the fifth round with ease.

Kilrain landed only one punch during the session, busying himself most of the time in keeping out of John L.'s way. He repeated his action of the fourth by avoiding severe punishment by failing to the ground after a light left to the body.

The champion scored heavily in the sixth with a left-hand smash to the jaw. It hurt Kilrain, who quickly fell into a clinch to save himself. In the scramble which followed both men fell to the turf heavily—with Sullivan on top. The wind was knocked out of Kilrain and he was carried to his corner.

Kilrain, suddenly shifting tactics again, forced the issue in the seventh and won by the proverbial mile. By sidestepping he avoided the rushing Sullivan and each time that John L. hurled himself at Kilrain, Jake's left to his face a wallop to the body. Kilrain drew first blood in the seventh with a smashing right-hander that laid open Sullivan's right ear.

* * *

Jake Cast Aside Caution and Battled John L.

Sullivan tore in at Kilrain in the eighth like an enraged bull. The champion was furious with anger, but the fact that Kilrain had scored first blood and had made him (Sullivan) miss almost every swing in the seventh burt the pride of Sullivan.

That round was perhaps the most cyclonic of the whole fight. Sullivan, rushing in the style that had made him famous, gave Kilrain no quarter. Jake tried to keep out of his path. Finding it useless, Jake elected to give battle to Sullivan.

And whirlwind milling resulted. The climax of the slashing rally in the centre of the ring in the seventh came when Sullivan broke through Kilrain's guard with a fearful right-hander. It caught Jake full on the mouth. Kilrain staggered backwards, was unable to get his feet and toppled over.

The seventh ended the aggressiveness of Jake Kilrain for a long, long while. That one punch convinced Jake of the terrific power which John L. packed in his mighty right fist. From then on through many rounds Kilrain fought solely on the defensive. Round after round Kilrain tied scratch and went down to the ground with the first Sullivan punch. No matter where he was hit or how light the tap, down he would go.

* * *

Kilrain Changed Style and Avoided Exchanges

The crowd, which at first had been with Kilrain, began to jeer and hiss. And Sullivan was in a fury over being balked round after round at getting at his enemy. He wanted to fight—and Kilrain wouldn't. But Kilrain was waging the only kind of battle that gave him a chance to win over the champion.

Time and again Sullivan begged Kilrain to "stand up and fight like a man." But Kilrain was guided by the advice of Charley Mitchell.

"Don't fight him—make him chase you. He'll wear himself out, I tell you, and if you'll just keep away from him and stop letting him hurt you with his speedless punches, you've got him."

And Kilrain nearly had Sullivan in the 37th round and again in the 48th.

RED SOX WIND UP SERIES WITH MACKMEN

Boston Boys Hope to Hit Stride Before Returning to Home Pastures Next Week

Philadelphia, May 31.—The Red Sox, who were only able to slice the holiday bill with the tailend Macks, wind up their present visit to Shibe Field this afternoon. Then they visit Washington, and next Thursday will be back in Boston.

The Red Sox had visions of a clean sweep when they took the first game, 10-6, but the afternoon pastime went against them, 4-3, in ten innings.

The early game was a farce. The Athletics played up to their usual form, and couldn't have beaten a gang of amateurs. In the afternoon, however, they took a brace, and their good work, coupled with a marked weakening on the part of Pennock and the ineffectiveness of Dumont, who relieved Herb, resulted in a victory for the locals.

The Mackmen tied up the count in the ninth and won out in the tenth with no one down. The inning tally was built on Dumont's passes to Witt and Shannon and an error on Roth's grounder by Bill James, who relieved Dumont when Roth batted.

With the bases loaded James hit Burns with a pitched ball. Witt being forced over with the winning tally.

Babe Ruth was the Athletics' nemesis. The big fellow's arm and bat enabled Boston to take the morning game and his home run drive in the eighth inning gave his side the lead in the afternoon.

Ruth's torrid smash was the undoing of Perry, who tried hard for victory. The teams went into the eighth inning deadlocked at 1 each.

Strunk singled and Ruth connected with a fast ball that found its final resting place in a book yard of one of the houses on Twentieth street.

Overseas Team in Action

The Boston team of the Allied Veterans' Baseball League was to play the Roxbury AllEnists at the Marcella street playground this afternoon. Play at 3 o'clock.

MONOHAN WILL HELP TRAIN WILLARD

Toledo, O., May 31.—Roy Archer, business manager for Jess Willard, who will meet Jack Dempsey in a championship bout July 4th, was all smiles today as a result of a telegram he received from Walter Monohan stating that heavyweight fighter would join the Willard camp here Monday. Monohan has been with a hospital unit at Lakewood, N. J., for some time, but was recently transferred to Newport News, Va. For some time efforts have been made to hasten Monohan's discharge, to insure his presence in Willard's camp when the big fellow settles down to hard training.

Word that the discharge has been granted and that Monohan will be here in time to boss the training job, takes a load off Archer's mind and doubtless will make the champion feel easier when he hears it.

"Monohan is the best trainer in the world and a wonderful sparring partner in addition," declared Archer today. "He weighs 220 pounds now. This will be the third big bout he has trained Jess for, that at Havana being the first."

Archer said he did not know whether Willard would stop off at Lawrence, Kansas, on his way here or not, but if he does it is possible that the other members of the party that left Los Angeles with him will come straight through, reaching Toledo Saturday. Archer states that Willard will positively be here not later than Saturday.

Archer today started on a hunt for sparring partners to assist Jack Hemple and Tom O'Neil. Athletes he wired to are Andy Anderson, Tony Melcher, Jack Heinen and Sam Langford. Jess has not boxed with a colored fellow, however, since he whipped Johnson, and may object.

The seat sale for the big fight is rapidly going on. Total receipts to date, Business Manager Flournoy states, amounts to $415,000. Hundreds of people thronged the Dempsey training quarters from morning till night, Decoration Day. In the morning Jack did five miles on the road, and in the afternoon he electrified the large gathering with four fast rounds of boxing, two with "Big Bill" Tate and two fast rounds with Terry Kellar. Jack seems to be in good condition with the exception of his wind. This will be taken care of next week with long road hikes.

Tex Rickard, Frank Flournoy and Roy Archer witnessed the afternoon boxing.

HORNE LOSES LINDER IN HOLIDAY MARATHON

Cliff Horne of Dorchester ran away with the twelve-mile modified Marathon in conjunction with the Knights of St. Finbar games at Russell Field, Cambridge. He took the lead after the first half mile, and was never headed. His time was 1 hour 8 minutes 15 1-5 seconds.

LeRoy Davis of Dorchester finished second, three-quarters of a lap ahead of Carl Linder, the B. A. A. Marathon winner.

CADDOCK WILL DEFEND HIS WRESTLING TITLE

Des Moines, Ia., May 31.—"Give me a little time to get into shape and I'll meet anyone in the world who thinks he has a claim to the heavyweight wrestling championship," Earl Caddock, who recently returned from overseas, declared here, enroute to his old home in Walnut, Iowa.

"However, I meant what I said in New York a few weeks ago," said Caddock, "and if I find I cannot get back into shape, I shall retire from the wrestling game and devote my time to farming."

This Day in History—May 31, 1919

THIS is the anniversary of the abolition in 1791 of punishment by the wheel in France. This barbarous practice was a relic of the Inquisition, and so acute was the torture that even the innocent confessed guilt to gain surcease from their misery.

The Darker the Day the Clearer the Call for You to Shine

The Speed of Birds

THE speed of birds is often overrated. The swift, for instance, has been credited with a speed of 150 miles an hour, and the popular imagination compares the flight of a sparrowhawk with that of a cannon ball. The homing pigeon can be relied on under fairly easy conditions to make sixty miles an hour, or considerably more.

CHAPTER XXXII

A Rat Hunt

Copyright 1917 by Robert W. Chambers

THE interior of the entire house was now in an uproar. Shots came fast from every landing, the semi-dusk of stair well and corridor was lighted by incessant pistol flashes and the whole building echoed the deafening racket.

Downstairs straight toward the uproar ran Sengoun with Neeland beside him. The halls were swimming in acrid fumes; the floors trembled and shook under their feet as a struggling, fighting knot of men went tumbling down the stairway below, reached the landing and burst into the rooms of the Inter-Extranations.

Leaning over the banisters Neeland saw Golden Beard and Doc Curfoot raging there, Curfoot like a Viking, his blue eyes ablaze. He hurled his empty pistol at the American; seized chairs, bronzes, andirons, the clock from the mantel, and sent a storm of heavy missiles through the doorway among the knot of men who were pressing him and who had already seized Ali Baba.

Then, from the banisters above Neeland and Sengoun saw Brandes moving stealthily, swiftly edging his way to a further door.

Steadying the elbow of his pistol hand in the hollow cup of his left palm, his weapon level, swerving as his quarry moved, he presently fired at Golden Beard and got him through the back. And then he shot him again deliberately through the body, as the man turned, made a menacing gesture toward him; took an uncertain step in his direction, another step wavering, blindly grotesque; then stood swaying there under the glare of a partly shattered chandelier from which hung long shreds of crystal prisms.

And Brandes, aiming once more with methodical and merciless precision, and taking what time he required to make a bull's eye on this great, reeling, golden-crowned skull, fired the third shot at his magnificent head.

The bronze Harvard lion dropped from Golden Beard's nerveless fist, the towering figure, stiffening, fell over rather slowly and lay across the velvet carpet as rigid as a great tree.

Shot to Death

Brandes went into the room, leaned over the dying man and fired into his body until his pistol was empty. Then he replaced the exhausted clip leisurely, leering down at his victim.

There was a horrid sound from the stairs, where Curfoot and another man were killing a waiter. Strange, sinister faces appeared everywhere from the smoke-filled club rooms; Stull came out into the hallway below and shouted up through the stair well:

"Say, Eddie! For Christ's sake come down here! There's a mob outside on the street and they're tearing the iron shutters off the cafe!"

Curfoot immediately started downstairs; Brandes, pistol in hand, came slowly out of the club rooms, still leering, his slitted greenish eyes almost phosphorescent in the semi-obscurity.

Suddenly he caught sight of Ilse Dumont standing close behind Sengoun and Neeland on the landing above.

"By God!" he shouted to Curfoot. "Here she is, Doc! Tell your men! Tell them she's up here on the next floor!"

Sengoun immediately fired at Brandes, who did not return the shot, but went plunging downstairs into the smoky obscurity below.

"Come on!" roared Sengoun to Neeland, starting forward with levelled weapon. "They've all gone crazy and it's time we were getting out of this."

"Quick!" whispered Neeland to Ilse Dumont. "Follow me downstairs! It's the only chance for you now."

But the passageway was blocked by a struggling, cursing, panting crowd and they were obliged to retreat into the club rooms.

In the salle de jeu Ali Baba, held fast by three men dressed as waiters, suddenly tripped up two of them, turned and leaped for the doorway. The two men who had been tripped scrambled to their feet and tore after him. When they reached the hallway the Eurasian was gone, but all of a sudden there came a crash of a shattered door from the third floor above, and the dim corridor rang with the frightful screaming of a woman.

"It's—that—that Russian girl!" stammered Ilse Dumont. "The girl I locked in! Oh, my God! my God! Karl Breslau is killing her."

Neeland sprang into the hall and raced up the stairs, but the three men disguised as waiters had arrived before him.

And there, across the threshold of the bedroom, backed up flat against the shattered door, Ali Baba was already fighting for his life, and the frightened Russian girl crept out from the bedroom behind him and ran to Neeland for protection.

From the Roof

Twice Neeland aimed at Ali Baba, but could not bring himself to fire at the bleeding, rabid object which snarled and slavered and bit and kicked, regardless of the blows raining on him. At last one of his assailants broke the half-demented creature's arm with a chair; and the bloody, battered thing squeaked like a crippled rat and darted away amid the storm of blows descending, limping and floundering up the attic stairs, his broken arm flapping with every gasping bound.

After him staggered his sweating and exhausted assailants, reeling past Neeland and Ilse Dumont and the terrified Russian girl who crouched behind her. But, half way up the stairs, the three halted and stood clinging to the banisters as though listening to something on the floor above them.

Neeland heard it, too, from the roof, came a ripping, splintering sound, a falling people on the [illegible] crying up the bolted scuttle. The [illegible] on the stairs hesitated a moment longer, then turned to flee [illegible] a hail of [illegible] shots [illegible] the attic stairs, [illegible] pitching and [illegible] down to the landing.

Two of them lay still. The rest [illegible] and limped on again [illegible] over the [illegible] those below.

The [illegible] on the leads have [illegible] into the garret! Breslau is [illegible]. Send along those American gunmen or somebody who can [illegible].

He was a gray-haired, ghastly [illegible] and [illegible], as he stood there at the head of the [illegible] stairs, breathing heavily, awaiting all from below, he said to Neeland coolly enough:

"You'd better go below, sir. We 'ad our orders to take this Breslau rat alive, but we can't do it now, and theres' like to be a 'orrid mess 'ere directly."

Down the stairs they crept, straight toward the frightful tumult still raging below, down past the wrecked club rooms, past a dead man sprawling on the landing across the blood-soaked carpet.

Down into the depths of the dusky building toward the lighted cafe floor whence came the uproar of excited men, while from the street outside rose the frantic yelling of the mob, mingled with the crash of glass and the clanging dissonance of iron shutters which were being battered into fragments.

• • •

Out of the frightful turmoil stormed Neeland and Sengoun, their pistols spitting flame, the two women clinging to their ragged sleeves.

Toward the boulevard below a line of police and of cavalrymen blocked the rue Vilna, and beyond them, the last of the men was being driven from the cafe des Baugars, where the first ambulances were arriving and the police [illegible] the [illegible] were already looking out of windows on the upper floors.

A cavalryman came clattering down the rue Vilna, gesticulating and calling out to Sengoun and Neeland to take their ladies and depart.

"Get us a taxicab—there's a good fellow," cried Sengound in high spirits, and the cavalryman, looking at their dishevelled attire, laughed and nodded as he rode ahead of them down the rue Vilna.

"Will you take this Russian girl to her home, Sengoun?" Neeland asked. And added in a low voice: "She is one of your own people you know."

"All right," said Sengoun blissfully. "I'd take the devil home if you asked me! Besides, I can talk to her about my regiment on the way. That will be wonderful, Neeland! That will be quite wonderful! I can talk to her in Russian about my regiment all the way home!"

He laughed and looked at his friend, at Ilse Dumont, at the drooping figure he was to take under her escort. He glanced down at his own ragged attire where he stood hatless, collarless, one sleeve of his evening coat ripped open to the shoulder.

"Isn't it wonderful!" he cried, bursting out in uncontrollable laughter. "Neeland, my dear comrade, this has been the most delightfully wonderful night of my entire life! But the great miracle is still to come. Hurrah for a thousand lances! Hurrah! Town taken by Prince Erlik! Hurrah!"

He Seized Girl

And he seized the young girl whom he was to escort to her home wherever that hazy locality might be—and carried her in his arms to the taxicab, amid the cheers and shouts of laughter from the knot of cavalrymen who had been watching the proceedings from the corner of the rue Vilna.

That shout of [illegible] appreciation inflamed Sengoun; he reached for his hat, to lift and wave it, but found no hat on his head. So he waved his tattered sleeve.

"Hurrah for France!" he cried. "Hurrah for Russia! I'm Sengoun of the Terek! And I'll have a thousand lances with which to explain to the Germans my opinion of them and of their Emperor!"

The troopers cheered him from their stirrups in spite of their officers, who pretended to check their mirth.

"Vive la France! Viva la Russia!" they roared. "Forward the Terek Cossacks!"

Sengoun turned to Ilse Dumont.

"Madame," he said, "in gratitude and admiration"—and he gracefully saluted her hand. Then to his comrade, "Neeland!"—seizing both the American's hands. "Such a night and such a comrade I shall never forget! I adore our night together; I love you as a brother. I shall see you before I go?"

"Surely, Sengoun, my dear comrade!"

"Alors au revoir!" He sprang into the taxicab. "To the Russian embassy," he called out, and turned to the half fainting girl on the seat beside him.

"Where do you live, my dear?" he asked very gently, taking her [illegible].

Rout the lurking freckle and yet enjoy the out-of-doors by wearing your veil Turkish fashion, with a broad-brimmed hat

By Nora Mullane

(In Good Housekeeping for June)

IT seems quite superfluous to urge on women and girls the necessity for giving the most serious consideration to the care of the skin during the Summer months when from exposure to wind and dust the scorching sun and sea air, both bring are sure to come. The skin must be perfectly protected, but much anxiety may be avoided by a little care and forethought.

Different characters of skin seem to be afflicted differently. For instance, girls with auburn or fair hair and the pale skin that attends these colors find themselves at the end of the very first day of vacation with a crop of golden freckles that grow darker and darker each day until the owner of the beauty spots will take any means offered by the complexion specialists to remove them as quickly as possible.

A simple lotion that will gradually fade either Summer or Winter freckles and is perfectly safe is made and used as follows.

Take equal parts of rose-water, fresh lemon juice and pure alcohol, and mix together. The next day, decant the clear portion and strain through muslin. Touch the freckles or discolorations with the lotion perhaps two or three times a day.

As a preventive of freckles the face should be well protected before taking long rides, yachting trips, et cetera, by rubbing into the skin before powdering a good cold cream or mixture of rose-water and glycerin, or lemon juice and glycerin—about ten drops of glycerin to an ounce of liquid. This will protect the skin and make the powder adhesive.

Complexions that freckle, tan, or sunburn easily should be properly veiled.

A New Romance by Mrs. Van de Water

SERIAL REPLETE WITH ABSORBING INTEREST

David DeLaine, War Hero, Is Left a Fortune by His Aunt's Will Provided He Marries the Girl of Her Choice

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER X.

Copyright, 1919, Star Company

JAMES CAREY to whom Samuel Leighton had written for his new chauffeur's reference, was wise enough to make no protest to David DeLaine's scheme.

In his heart he was rather glad to learn of it. From a distance he had watched this son of his old friend—for Carey and David's father had been boys together.

David's mother had died when he was a baby. Her husband had known how to make money, but he had also known how to spend it recklessly. At the time of the father's death the only son was twenty years old. When the debts were all paid and the funeral bills settled very little remained of what had been a comfortable fortune.

It was then that Miss Jeanne De Laine proposed that her nephew make his home with her.

"I will help you financially, my dear Davey," she had said.

But David was firm in his determination to stand on his own feet. He had succeeded in working his way through college, and had secured a decent but not very remunerative position, which he held until the outbreak of the war. Then he enlisted.

All this James Carey knew, for he had corresponded with David from time to time. He had gloried in what he called "the boy's spunk" in not accepting his aunt's offer to support him. Now that David had written him of the terms of Miss DeLaine's will he gloried still more in the stand taken by his young friend. Anything that David had asked of him he was willing to do. Therefore, if the lad wanted to be an ordinary chauffeur, Carey would send his possible employer such a letter as an ordinary chauffeur would want written to the man for whom he hoped to work.

A Favorable Report

"I know the young man about whom you inquire," Mr. Carey wrote to Mr. Leighton. "I have known him from his boyhood. He is industrious, honest, trustworthy, and has no bad habits. Were I in need of someone to drive a car I would not hesitate to employ David Smith."

A copy of this note was enclosed in James Carey's letter to David.

"Here is what I am mailing to your new employer," he wrote. "I hope it is what you want. I am proud of you. Indeed, I have always been proud of you. You are quite right to prefer to work under an assumed surname. Baltimore and New York are not so far apart after all, and DeLaine is not a common name. I am never afraid that you will dishonor it—but just because you do honor it you want to avoid its becoming the subject of curious comment.

"Write me when you can, and when you make enough money to take a trip South make me happy by coming here.

"I may add that I am glad you never met the young woman to whom your poor rich aunt was so anxious to see you married. I use the word 'poor' advisedly, for I have a sincere pity for anyone who thinks that love can be bought. (You see, I am an old bachelor—a very old one—so have romantic notions at 61.)

"I suppose I should pity the girl, too. Not because she did not succeed in marrying you, but because she has so little delicacy as to be party to a scheme to trap a young man. Your aunt had the excuse of her love for you and her affection for the girl. The girl herself had no excuse except a desire to get married. You are fortunate never to have met her."

"Ye gods!" David DeLaine sprang to his feet when he read this condemnation and began to walk up and down his hallroom. "I did not mean to give this dear old chap the impression that Aunt Jeanne's protegee was aware of my aged relative's plans. I must write him that the girl may have known nothing of them. But—I wonder if she did!"

He stopped in his very limited walk. He had always taken it for granted that Desiree Leighton had been innocent of the schemes that his aunt was intent upon. Now it occurred to him that if Miss De Laine had talked so freely to her nephew of Desiree she might have talked as freely to Desiree of Davey. In that case the girl must have loathed the thought of him—if she was a nice girl. And of course she was!

He told himself this fiercely. His employer's daughter's face came before his mental vision. If she was Desiree Leighton, she was incapable of planning to marry any man.

What Difference, Anyway?

Then he brought himself up sharply. What difference did the girl's attitude make to him? Nevertheless, he decided to write to Mr. Carey and thank him for his letter and suggest to him that probably the girl in question was absolutely innocent of the net that had been spread for her.

If she suspected it, how she must hate the man who had been "picked out" for her!

The thought was not pleasant. To banish it David re-read the copy of the very satisfactory recommendation that James Carey had sent to Samuel Leighton.

That same evening Samuel Leighton read this same epistle aloud to his daughter and sister.

"I am glad," he commented, "that I let Smith order his livery without waiting for this letter. You see, it is quite what it should be. Carey says he would not hesitate to employ the fellow himself."

"His manner and speech seem above those of the average chauffeur," Mrs. Duffield observed.

Her brother smiled. "That is putting it conservatively, Sylvia. Sometimes Smith puzzles me a bit by his good English."

"I don't see why," was the comfortable rejoinder. "You forget, Samuel, that in these days of free schools the poor have wonderful opportunities. This young chap very likely had sense enough to make the most of such opportunities offered even the lower classes."

Desiree Leighton said nothing.

Eat a Good Breakfast

By Brice Belden, M. D.

BREAKFAST should be the best meal of the day, and if one has not injured his health in some way, as by dissipation or overeating, he will have a good appetite in the morning. Such an appetite is an excellent sign of good health.

After the hours of rest following the day's work there should be a strong desire to break one's fast. But very many people are accustomed to take for breakfast a roll, a cup of coffee and perhaps some fruit. They seem to believe that the digestive organs are not prepared in the morning to assimilate a good meal, and it is true that they frequently have but little appetite at that time, owing to some fault of their own.

The remarkable engine known as the human body cannot be run without fuel. Coffee is a stimulant and contains nothing capable of supplying heat units. Yet it is relied upon to start the engine in the morning. It is as though one were to give an automobile containing no gasoline or oil a good shove and expect it to run for several hours.

The scanty and hurried breakfast is detrimental to health and unfits a person for the morning's work. People who retain their health under such circumstances do so in spite of their habits and because they are gifted with considerable reserve vitality.

The noontime meal should be small and made up of easily digested articles. A heavy meat meal at this time is apt to make one sleepy and inactive in the afternoon. People who eat a scanty breakfast are apt to overeat at noontime.

After a hearty breakfast, unless one takes far more exercise than the average citizen gets, appetite and digestive power are tempered to the reduced needs of the body. It therefore follows that a heavy meal is not required in the evening.

Hat For the Evening

By Rita Stuyvesant

THE transition from the service uniform to the more feminine finery promises to be a pleasant one if we are to judge by the crowds of well-gowned women and their returned heroes. Especially smart is the millinery worn at this season of rejoicing, for gracefulness characterizes the new evening hats, made of exquisite fabrics and soft filmy materials in the choicest models.

An enormous hat that impressed one with its quiet elegance was recently seen. It was created from black Chantilly lace and fine net well met with jet. A large drooping wire frame was covered all over with the net and was faced underneath with the same sheer fabric. Over this fell a soft frill of the Spanish lace, and a picturesque touch was given by a string of glittering jet beads encircling the transparent crown. A hat of this type will show one's smartly coiffured hair to advantage.

Exquisite hats to wear with semi-formal dinner gowns are also being made of margot, fine Valenciennes lace, spotted net and other featherweight fabrics.

There is a splendid chance just now to express one's individual taste in millinery, for never before have there been so many styles of colors and handsome materials. Intense blue tulle, conspired with Victory roses to make a triumphant hat, is sure to find a welcome in the heart of the woman who appreciates true artistry in millinery.

Instead of being placed on the hat as usual, the flat roses were caught between the tulle on the upper and underside of the brim, concealing yet revealing their beauty behind a veiled surface. This lovely hat was worn with a dinner gown of beige georgette.

Household Hints

It is advisable in most knitted stockings and more especially in children's, to make the heel more durable than the other part. Any one who knows how to knit in an extra thread of cotton or wool, or even silk, can make a thickened heel in the following manner—Cast on a few stitches, and join in a round. Then knit a round. Join the extra thread, and stretch it over the fingers of the left hand. Put the needle into the first stitch and under the stretched thread at the back. Next knit the stitch with the first wool, but do not bring the stitch thread through to the front. Put the needle into the next stitch and over the stretched wool. Knit as before. Repeat the last two stitches. Every round is the same, but each time you put the needle over the stretched wool at the beginning of a round choose a different stitch—that is, put it over at a different spot each time. Remember to have your extra thread one or two sizes smaller than the other wool.

Emery paper that has become worn by constant use can be restored to its former roughness by placing in a warm oven for a few minutes before required.

To prevent mold from forming on top of the liquid in which pickles are kept, put in a few pieces of horseradish root.

• • •

When using sandpaper to remove old paint dampening it with benzine will cause the work to be accomplished sooner.

To clean brass flower pots or trays, rub them with a piece of lemon; then pour boiling water over them, and, finally, polish with a soft, dry cloth.

The Rhyming Optimist

THE PERSIAN CAT

By Aline Michaelis.

THINGS do not always smoothly run, just as I'd have them do; each first brings many an unkind dun when jits are very few. For rent and stew the prices soar, for tonics and for pills; each day the medicos ask more to cure the pip or chills. But for such luxuries as these I'll say I do not pine nor ask I silken hosiery nor casks of purple wine. But still I think I could enjoy a living soft and fat. Such pleasures do not seem to cloy upon my Persian cat. However scarce may be my coin he's sure to get his fill of porterhouse or tenderloin, yet fears no butcher's bill. The cows may go upon a strike and milk may skyward soar, to him all prices look alike; he only drinks the more. The festive rat he does not pursue, the mouse he does not slay. He'd rather calmly sit and chew upon a cream frappe. I've heard of lilies fair and fine that neither toil nor spin, but know this pampered feline their lucky lot can spin. And thus each day I grub away the needful coin to get so I the butcher-man can pay to feed the pampered pet. There is a sect that says some day men shall return as brutes, and for this fate I often pray—my thought of right it suits. If I could be my Persian cat, and if my cat could be the man who has to keep me fat, I'd laugh aloud with glee.

Time for Resignation

The army examiner was confronted, among many other applicants for commissions, with an exceedingly dull young man.

Question after question of the most soluble kind remained unanswered.

The examiner was fuming, and resorting to sarcasm, said.

"Let it be supposed you are an officer in command of some infantry. In your rear is an impassable abyss. On your flanks rocks rise perpendicularly heavenward. In front of you is your enemy, ten times your strength. What would you do under the circumstances?"

"I think, sir," said the hopeful one, "I would resign!"

People Constipated and Don't Know It!

It seems odd, but it is true, that you may be constipated and not know it.

You can see why it is. Take a glass and pour in water until full. If you keep on pouring in water after the glass is full, it will run over, but the glass stays full.

Just so with your bowels; they get full of waste matter, and then they pass off or expel from the body only about the same amount that goes into it in the form of food.

So you may have a movement of the bowels every day and yet there will remain waste matter that ought to be removed.

Give your bowels a gentle but thorough cleaning out and you'll feel great.

A fine prescription for this is put up and sold under the name of Dr. True's Elixir. Doctors and druggists use it in their own families. Costs but little and brings health to men, women and children. Sweet and pleasant tasting. Works gently. Children like it. Remember the name, Dr. True's Elixir.

The Tie That Binds

BERT FORD'S WAR STORY IN BOOK FORM

"The Fighting Yankees Overseas" Puts Human Interest Into History

Bert Ford, who is once more a member of the Boston American staff, has written a book which is on the press and which will be offered for sale throughout New England very soon.

"The Fighting Yankees Overseas," is the title and it's as snappy as its name. Ford's book is an absorbing, human interest "close-up" of the achievements won and the sacrifices made by the men of the Yankee Division in the world war.

It avoids the dull, stereotyped form of a history. Every chapter is a story in itself and they all weld a sequence that constitutes an historical narrative which will be an important contribution to the military annals of New England.

You remember how Bert Ford scooped New England on all of the big, overseas stories about the Yankee Division. His cables to the Boston American and Sunday Advertiser were the first to inform the public of the sensational shake-up in the Twenty-sixth Division.

HAVY CLEAN BEATS.

He had a clean beat on the transfers of Colonel Logan and Colonel Hume and another on their reinstatements. He had an exclusive when the Yankee Division was detached for further service with the First Army which was the army way of announcing that our fellows were about ready to pack up and start for home. And he scored a climax to his scoop series when he cabled from Brest on actual sailing of Yankee Division units.

The point of all of which is that a war correspondent from home who was so intimately conversant with affairs for the Yankee Division was found to have a fund of interesting facts when he sat down to write a book.

Norman E. McPhail, treasurer of the American Printing Company, No. 201 South street, is the publisher. "Mac" was formerly foreman of the Boston American composing room. He is a kingpin among printers. He says he is going to turn out "some book," and "Mac" doesn't bluff.

By the way, Bert Ford had an experience on the western front unique even in war correspondence.

He was the only war correspondent from New England fully accredited with the American Expeditionary Forces and the British armies.

He was the only war correspondent from New England who accompanied the American Army of Occupation into Germany, when it remained three months studying conditions.

WITH FIRST TO CROSS RHINE.

Mr. Ford saw miles and miles of German infantry and artillery retreating, decked like a victorious army. He talked with many of their officers and privates. He visited the British and French bridgeheads. He accompanied the squad that carried the first American flag across the Rhine.

HE WAS THE ONLY WAR CORRESPONDENT AUTHORIZED BY THE WAR DEPARTMENT TO RETURN FROM FRANCE WITH THE YANKEE DIVISION.

As a representative of the International News Service, one of the three agencies that feed all of the newspapers in the United States and Canada, Mr. Ford enjoyed a roving commission that enabled him to traverse the Western front from the Alps to Switzerland.

He saw every type of Allied troops in action and witnessed every battle in which American forces engaged.

He interviewed and shook hands with King Albert of Belgium and King George of England. He interviewed all of the leading French, British and American generals. He was entertained by Marshal Foch and General Pershing and rode in special trains. He motored all over Belgium, France, Luxembourg and the occupied section of Germany.

He was in two serious army automobile smash-ups and had many narrow escapes from bombs and shells. He was gassed in the eyes and throat but not permanently. He made many flights from an aeroplane and from an observation balloon. And after all his thrills and observations he has not been published before in any form.

Filene, vice-president of the Massachusetts Credit Union Association; Max Mindell, president of the association; J. C. Bliss, Jr., Felix Sternberg, Charles W. Bird, executive secretary; Dr. W. F. McCalb, managing director, and Howard Spenley.

BERT FORD, AS HE LOOKED ON OVERSEAS DUTY

AMERICAN NAVY MUST EQUAL ANY, SAYS BRITTEN

Chairman of House Naval Affairs Will Oppose Any Attempt to Cut Down Personnel

By International News Service.

Washington, May 31. — "America must take her stand, if not as mistress, at least as the equal of any power on the seas as well as on the land," said Representative Britten, chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, in a statement to the International News service today. At the same time he said he was "astonished when Secretary Daniels informed the committee that the three-year building program which was used so successfully as a big stick to drive the nations of the world into a league of nations, was to be abandoned."

Representative Britten gave notice that he would oppose any move to cut down the officers and enlisted personnel of the navy, and that he "would not stand for the placing in reserve of battleships that cost the taxpayers hundreds of millions."

"The indiscriminate slashing of appropriations may sound fine in this day of heavy taxation," Britten observed, "but the people of the country will insist on a first class navy. I shall always contend that the policing of the seas shall never again be left alone to England."

ASTONISHED AT DANIELS.

Representative Britten's statement was:

"I was astonished when Secretary Daniels informed the committee that the three-year building program which was used so successfully as a big stick to drive the nations of the world into the League of Nations was to be abandoned, now that the covenant of the league is an assured success, not so much because of my confidence in the navy to maintain itself but because of what the Secretary said regarding in London that our navy should be incomparably the greatest in the world, and this after the league covenant had been announced.

"This, of course, led naval enthusiasts to believe that the proposed three-year program was to remain in effect and that America was to go ahead as the predominant naval power of the world, not for military purposes, but for peace purposes and the protection of our vastly increasing commerce on the high seas.

SAYS PUBLIC IS WITH HIM.

"I am quite sure that the American public will not countenance a slashing of naval appropriations merely in the interest of economy, but that the highest efficiency in our force of our national defence from now on must be maintained irrespective of what the government does with a reduced army.

"I, for one, will not stand for the placing in reserve of battleships that cost the taxpayers of the country hundreds of millions of dollars, where they will rot away and become obsolete without action.

"I will oppose any attempt on the part of the administration to cut down the officers and enlisted personnel to such a point that the principal ships of the navy cannot be operated in manoeuvres and training on the high seas just as is done by every first-class naval power on earth.

NAVY MUST EQUAL ENGLAND'S.

"I hope that our entrance into the league of nations will not be used as a subterfuge for economy in the navy because no one can now tell just what part we are to play in the future domination of world peace and I shall always contend that the policing of the seas shall never again be left alone to England but that we must share equally in this honor and expense and go forth, man for man, ship for ship with the greatest naval power on earth.

"The claim that England is the undisputed mistress of the seas since forever be the water that has passed by the mill and America must take her stand, if not as mistress, at least the equal of any power on earth on the sea as well as on the land."

WOMAN HELD AS TAXI DRIVER'S SLAYER

Another Sought in Mysterious Shooting at Summerford, Ohio

Columbus, O., May 31.—One young woman is under arrest and the police are searching for another in connection with the murder of Milton Given, Pomovan, a taxi driver. Donovan was shot and killed and robbed near Summerford, Madison County.

Mrs. Lelia Grizzel, twenty-three, of this city, was arrested as she tramped through the tracks near the scene of the murder. She admits having had a ride last night in Donovan's car, but said she got out to pick wild flowers. She maintains she knows nothing of the murder and arson.

The police say that money found on Mrs. Grizzel was folded to fit the empty purse lying beside Donovan's body. An unused revolver also was found in her possession.

The police frankly announced that the second woman they are seeking is Margaret Norris, alias Margaret Hunter.

Donovan was shot twice in the back and at such short range that his clothing was afire when he was found. The shots could only have been fired by some one on the rear seat of the machine. The slain man was thirty-three years old and lived in this city.

SENOR ALVAREZ TORRES HAD THE MAP.

It showed where the treasure of the old buccaneer Morgan was buried. Can you help him find it—and—well, you can imagine how Jack London would handle a situation like that. But you don't have to imagine. You can read for yourself just what he did do with this wonderful story, right now, while the World begins next Monday, June 2, in the Boston American.

CLEARING HOUSE FOR IDEAS ON CHURCH WORK

Interchurch World Movement Conference to Be Held in Boston Next Week

To lay the foundation for its Massachusetts State organization, the executive committee of the Interchurch World Movement of North America has arranged for an Interboard Conference in Boston on Monday and Tuesday. Representatives of Protestant religious missionary, philanthropical and educational organizations throughout the State will attend.

The general proposals of the movement as indorsed at the recent national conference in Cleveland by officials of boards representing Protestants of seventy-six denominations with 200,000 separate churches and a combined constituency of 50,000,000 persons, will be presented for consideration from a State standpoint.

DISCUSS RECONSTRUCTION.

The meeting will amount to "clearing house" of ideas and information on reconstruction problems.

Lorimer Hall, in Tremont Temple, is to be the scene of the meeting, which will consist of two sessions on Monday and a morning session Tuesday.

Methods of making a survey of conditions in this State will be discussed, as well as local problems which demand attention in the different city and rural districts.

Meetings similar to this one are planned for every State in the Union within the next few months. Everything usually every project that falls within the scope of the movement, at home and abroad, is to be listed, and the aggregate summarized in terms of dollars, men and materials needed.

NEED 200,000 WORKERS.

It is estimated that the survey will reveal a need of more than 200,000 additional workers in the home and foreign fields.

S. Earl Taylor of New York, international executive secretary of the movement, points out that the churches altogether are spending approximately $200,000,000 a year on their current budgets.

Nothing in the nature of organic union is contemplated by the Interchurch movement, which is a co-operative agency through the aid of which interested denominations preserve their denominational integrity but concentrate their forces for general Christian welfare in such a way as to obtain efficiency through teamwork. Their joining in this nation-wide movement is largely the result of the success of the united war work of the allied nations, each of which preserved its national integrity while it left for the American border. His place was taken by Judge William J. Day.

LOGAN RETURNS TO BENCH ON MONDAY

Edward L. Logan, formerly colonel of the 101st Infantry, will resume his duties Monday morning as presiding justice of the Municipal Court. He has been away from his duties as justice of the court since the old 9th Massachusetts left for the Mexican border. His place was taken by Judge William J. Day.

COX ENDORSES HUB HONOR ROLL DRIVE

Lieutenant-Governor Channing H. Cox in an open letter to the Honor Roll drive committee states, "The purpose of the Citizens' Honor Roll Committee to erect in every ward in Boston a bronze memorial to contain the names of every man who went into the service—soldiers, sailors and marines—is a most commendable one, and will, I am sure, be endorsed and supported by the devoted people of Boston who hold in highest esteem the matchless service of their own who responded to their country's call and have brought new honor to Boston."

Unwise to Cut Yeowomen Out of $100 Bonus Bill

The elimination by the Massachusetts House of Representatives of the yeowomen (yeomen F) from the benefit of the so-called $100 bonus bill strikes the American as an unwise precedent. Waiving all other considerations, and there are other considerations in favor of including the women in the military service within the benefits of this bill, it is sufficient that we ought not to discriminate between the military service of the men and of the women, merely because in individual instances the men may have incurred physical danger or the women may have increased their salaries by their military service.

In the modern war the nation wins which is able to mobilize all its human resources, including women. Between two nations equally matched today, that nation which mobilizes its women best into service, other things being equal, will win the war. Moreover, it is an accepted principle all over the civilized world that there should be no difference between the compensation of men and women for the same class of service.

Now, the $100 bonus bill allows the yeowomen to receive the benefits, though some of them incurred no physical dangers and some of them improved their economic conditions. It is a cardinal principle of the workmen of the country and of the world, recognised from California to the very interior of Russia among all the working classes, that women should receive the same reward for the same work that is received by men.

No one denies that the women who entered the military service were moved by patriotic impulses as strongly as moved the men; that their work was as important and that they rendered it with as much efficiency. No provision for honor or money compensation for service in the war makes a distinction between men who fought at the front and men who performed the necessary duties behind the front, out of danger. Such a distinction would be impracticable if it were just, and the rule applies equally to women.

The State should not be niggardly in its recognition of the services of its men. Not any sum of money could compensate them for the service which they rendered in the national crisis. To give all the men the maximum sum would at least remove any future charge of unfair discrimination.

Adequate Punishment for Auto Thieves

There is before the Legislature a bill the purpose of which, as stated by its authors, is "to provide adequate punishment for automobile thieves." If the facts are as stated by its proponents the bill should be enacted by the Legislature as quickly as possible.

That there is organised thievery of automobiles in the Metropolitan District is evident from the newspaper reports. The police tell us that in a recent seventy-two-hour period eighteen automobiles were stolen, an average of a car every four hours. Some of the thefts were committed during the busy hours of the day in the heart of the business district. These incidents indicate the need of adequate punishment.

The only question remaining is whether the present law is sufficient. Those interested in breaking up the alleged bands of automobile thieves assert that it is not. It is their contention that a person who steals a car cannot be punished severely unless it is actually shown that he attempted to effect the sale of the stolen automobile. They also assert that the present penalty provided by law is insufficient to deter the thievery.

Fore River Makes Record

With the launching of the destroyer Gillis at the Fore River Shipbuilding yard, the great undertaking in the construction of destroyers by the Fore River ship yard is completed. It has been a wonderful record. The Fore River ship yard has built more destroyers and built them more rapidly than any other ship yard in the world.

Before the war sixteen months was the shortest time in which any destroyer has ever been built in America. The Fore River ship yard, during the war, built a destroyer in five and a half months. During the war we are informed that the best record that the English, the great shipbuilding nation of the world, was able to make in the construction of destroyers, though pressed by the blockade of the German submarines to her highest efforts, was ten months. Thus, our Boston shipbuilding organization built these boats, which were the real terror of the German submarines, in almost half the time of the greatest British effort.

This record is a great credit to the Fore River organization of officers and men and to Boston and Massachusetts. It brings back to us the glorious days when Boston and the neighboring New England seaports led the world in the construction of fast seagoing ships, ships that carried our flag by anything afloat, and, at their tall mastheads, waved our colors in friendship or defiance, as the case might be, in every port of the world.

MIXING WITH THE NEIGHBORS

You are located in a village, town or section of a city which you do not like, but because of certain circumstances it is necessary for you to remain.

You stew and fret about this and pick flaws in your neighbors.

Don't be so foolish.

Why not have a heart-to-heart talk with yourself, going over the matter in a sensible way?

Since you cannot change your position and your existence, make up your mind to see only the bright spots instead of digging deeper each day to unearth things you do not like.

Try being more friendly with those in your neighborhood, mingle with them more, take an interest in community doings and cultivate a community spirit that is genuine.

There are many more companionable persons who touch elbows with you every day than you would believe in your present state of mind.

If you take the right attitude yourself it won't be long before you will realize an awakening and life will be brighter and more worth while.

By K. C. B.

DEAR K. C. B.—On a boat to New York there is a porter who reads your column. I know this because I saw him reading it. And because he does I want you to write something for me. I was a passenger on the boat a few nights ago and in the morning this porter took my two heavy bags and went to the pier with me and waited while I telephoned. Then he carried the bags outside just as the young man whom I expected to meet came along. And I was so excited that I forgot all about the porter, and we drove away without tipping him. He was such a nice porter and I am so ashamed. Won't you please tell him that I didn't do it on purpose. MARGARET K.

TO THE porter.
ON THE New York boat
DEAR PORTER.
IN MARGARET'S letter,
SHE GAVE her address,
AND HER full name.
AND I'VE written to her,
THAT I'M quite sure,
THAT AFTER you were through,
WITH HER two heavy bags,
AND HAD taken them down
FROM THE deck of the boat
TO THE telephone booth,
AND THEN to the taxi,
AND HAD then waited,
WHILE MARGARET,
AND THE young man,
HAD GRABBED each other
AND SHAKEN hands,
OR SAID: "How do you do,"
OR KISSED,
OR WHATEVER they did
AND AFTER that,
YOU HAD stood there,
WHILE BOTH of them
HAD CLIMBED into the taxi,
AND HAD ridden away
THAT I was quite sure,
WHEN ALL this happened,
THAT YOU stood there
FOR A moment or two
AND WATCHED the taxi
AND SHRUGGED your shoulders
AND SMILED
AND HURRIED back
TO GET somebody else,
THAT WASN'T in love.
AND I'VE told Margaret
I WAS quite certain,
THAT IN a porter's life,
THERE ARE other things,
BESIDES JUST the dimes,
AND THE two-bit pieces,
AND THE occasional half,
AND THE rarer dollar,
BECAUSE ONCE upon a time
I HEARD an old lady,
TELL A colored porter,
THAT IT wouldn't be fair
IF HE carried her bag,
BECAUSE SHE was poor,
AND COULDN'T tip him,
AND HE took her arm,
AND HE took her bag,
AND I heard him tell her,
WE ALL couldn't be rich,
BUT WE all grew old,
AND WHEN he left her,
WHATEVER SHE said,
HE WAS wearing a smile,
THAT YOU couldn't have bought,
FOR A five-dollar tip.

I THANK you.

"SOMEWHERE IN THE WEST"

Twin daughters were born to Mrs. Frances Baer of Newcastle, Pa., formerly of Manchester, N. H., while Mrs. Baer was riding on a Pullman express train from Newcastle to Seattle, Wash. The twins arrived somewhere between Pennsylvania and the Pacific coast. An army doctor, who happened to be on the train, attended the mother and babies. All three are reported as doing well. But the train was speeding rapidly and the question of just what town will register the births seems undecided. If the train went by way of Minneapolis and St. Paul the interesting event would have been most appropriate to the "Twin Cities."

SERVICE TIE

Inspector Thomas E. Quinn and Sergeant William M. Chase of the Portland police have entered neck-and-neck on their twenty-eighth year of continuous service on the force. They were appointed the same day, May 23, 1893.

OLD ENOUGH TO KNOW BETTER

A pure white lady's slipper, which was picked up in Pembroke, gives rise to suspicion that Dame Nature has the dancing craze. This Pembroke blossom is as white as any girl's party slipper. But why not two slippers? What became of the other one? Maybe Nature lost it in the woodland whirl. Flighty dame! She should be more careful of her finery, especially in these days of lofty cost of footwear.

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Another petticoat victory. Dr. Helen I. McGillicuddy of Boston was elected high outside sentinel at the fortieth annual convention of Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters. She is the first woman elected to an executive position in the order. She defeated a male candidate by two votes, a narrow margin. But skirts are being worn narrow this season, anyhow.

SUCH IS LIFE IN WEST MILLBURY

William Fairbanks of West Millbury raised the following question at a discussion on dog-killing:

"Say, can you tell me if you can shoot a dog that barks all night at the moon? I want to tell you that there is a dog here in West Millbury that is a regular night owl, and the only time you get any sleep in the section of the town where I live is when the nights are rainy. Then the dog is not disturbed because, I suppose, his view of the moon is obstructed.

TROUBLES OF A GRAND DUKE

Remember Grand Duke Boris Vladimirovitch? On a pre-war visit to America he quaffed champagne from feminine slippers and was otherwise cute. Of late he has been living in Paris. But France hinted a diplomatic "move on." He was escorted to the Spanish frontier. Spain barred him out. Then he headed for Italy. On the sporting principle of trying anything once Italy admitted him. It's tough for common persons when they cannot find a house to suit them. But think of the bother when you are rejected by whole countries.

THEIR LAST FISHING TRIP

A Dorchester physician went fishing down on Cape Cod with his sister-in-law. At the end of the day the sister-in-law had caught forty fish—count 'em, forty. The Doc had caught none. Nothing to count. The physician bribed the s. i. l. with promise of ten dollars to let him claim the catch. She agreed. But, not getting the ten dollars at the end of three days, she told the story and now the Doc is sure women have no sense of humor.

YOU LOSE

A chap on deception intent
Said: "It's cheaper to move than pay rent."
He thought so until
He went over the bill
That the high-cost-of-moving man sent.

Ireland Claims Rights, Says Ex-Governor Dunne

Of the three delegates from America to bring Ireland's cause before the Peace Conference, EDWARD P. DUNNE writes exclusively tomorrow in the Sunday Advertiser and American, explaining their stand, which Secretary Lansing has just taken exception to. THERE CAN BE NO WORLD PEACE, Dunne declares, until the IRISH QUESTION IS SETTLED. T. P. O'CONNOR writes also on the Irish question—WHAT ENGLAND IS GOING TO DO ABOUT IT. What will be done with the ex-Kaiser? How a British Intelligence officer ran away with a German "Zep." Has anyone "a right to die"? discussed by Marie Corelli and GEORGE BERNARD SHAW. And a full program of other good things.

America has been stirred during the past week by the virtual EXPULSION OF THE IRISH DELEGATES to the Peace Conference. Following a convention of Irish-Americans in Philadelphia on February 22, called for the purpose of bringing the CASE OF IRELAND before the Conference of Nations at Paris, three of America's foremost citizens were appointed a COMMITTEE OF THREE to proceed to Paris and claim, in the name of Ireland, "the right of all peoples to self-determination"; "the right of the governed to be governed only with its own consent"; "the equality of right among nations, small as well as great"; and "mutual guarantees of political independence and territorial integrity to great and small nations alike"—great principles enunciated by our President as among those for which we entered and won the war. These delegates were Frank P. Walsh of New York, Michael J. Ryan of Philadelphia and Edward P. Dunne, former Governor of Illinois. TOMORROW EDWARD P. DUNNE WILL TELL WHY they went—WHAT they feel IRELAND HAS A RIGHT TO DEMAND—AND THE RESULT THAT MIGHT BE EXPECTED. This is an exclusive article.

In connection with these CLAIMS, which the Peace Conference has indicated it WILL REFUSE TO CONSIDER—according to Secretary Lansing's dictum to the Committee of Three, "advising" them to cease all activities—MR. DUNNE says: "Internationally, IRELAND IS THE GATEWAY OF THE ATLANTIC, the last outpost of Europe toward the West—WEST IRELAND is the point on which the GREAT TRADE ROUTES between the West and East converge. Her INDEPENDENCE is DEMANDED BY THE FREEDOM OF THE SEAS. Her great harbors must be open to all nations instead of being monopolized by England. Today these harbors are empty and idle solely because the ENGLISH POLICY IS DETERMINED TO RETAIN IRELAND AS A BARREN BULWARK for English aggrandizement." And the "unique geographical situation of this island, far from being a benefit and a safeguard to Europe," Mr. Dunne adds, "is subjected to the purposes of the ENGLISH POLICY OF WORLD DOMINION."

As to WHAT ENGLAND INTENDS TO DO about the Irish tangle—that is discussed ably by T. P. O'CONNOR, in another of his weekly political reviews, which are a feature of this paper each Sunday. No one knows more of the inner workings of politics in England than he; and he says: "In private more than in public speech members of all parties in the House of Commons come to me nightly to deplore in accents almost of DESPAIR, the IRISH ENTANGLEMENT, and to express their fervent desire to have it settled and done with ON LINES SATISFACTORY TO IRISH ASPIRATIONS FOR RECOGNITION OF HER NATIONHOOD. But these same men HAVE NO CHOICE BUT TO GO ON SUPPORTING MILITARIST RULE in Ireland," he says, "a rule which begets and alternates with deeds of violence which may become more widespread and more sanguinary as time goes on."

HOW A BRITISH INTELLIGENCE OFFICER RAN AWAY WITH A ZEPPELIN is as thrilling a story as has come out of the great war. He found his way into the midst of the German Air Service, and, as pilot of one of the huge German bombing craft brought the "Zep" captive to England. Through studying it, the British were able to revolutionize their methods of defence against such raids.

WHAT WILL BE DONE WITH THE KAISER? SELF-RIDGE HENNEGAN takes up this question of the hour tomorrow, and compares the indictment against him with that which the World Powers brought against Napoleon a century ago. Napoleon then, in last extremity, surrendered himself to the English, throwing himself upon their mercy; in like dilemma, Mr. Hennegan believes, Wilhelm will appeal to America and President Wilson.

"The right to die——" Is there any such thing? Marie Corelli says there isn't. "To claim that there is, is pure egotism as well as moral cowardice—it is the little pygmy shaking its fist at the presence of the Almighty. God gives the life, and only when God wills to take it again should such a precious endowment be rendered back to the giver." As to what should be done with "incurables"—Miss Corelli says that there are no incurables: that "a doctor who presumes to tell a patient he or she is incurable is unfit for his business."

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW—as usual—takes the opposite viewpoint of the question. He would make "UNFITNESS TO LIVE" A CAPITAL CRIME; and he would put in the list with the hopelessly incurable "many cases which are not in asylums or hospitals for the incurables. Idle people, incorrigibly violent people, and generally people who either consume more than they produce or cannot behave themselves without wasting other people's time in guarding or restraining them should ALL COME UP FOR JUDGMENT. Unfitness to live should be the ONLY capital charge. You would not then have men remorselessly hanged for very pardonable homicides, whilst others are allowed to prey on the community all their lives without remonstrance."

Recently a revenue collector ruled that "live snails are wild animals in captivity," and that frogs' legs must be classed as "poultry." You may expect similar freak judgment on a lot of things the luxury tax law has fastened on. When is a girl not a girl? Are corsets "underwear"? Is a small-sized man not a man? Are eye glasses jewelry? Is a male infant NOT a boy? Those are just a few of the puzzlers the tax confronts us with.

"Bluebirds" is the colorful cover of the Magazine Section tomorrow. Especially painted for this paper by Carl Link.

"Summer shopping suits" are marvels of smartness and comfort and practicability, by that maker of lovely things, Lady Duff-Gordon, the famous "Lucile."

The final installment of Rider Haggard's "Moon of Israel" appears tomorrow. Everyone who has followed this fascinating romance of Old Egypt will want to read the last of it tomorrow.
